MURDER!

Lilly Shannon Nickerson, a Boston woman, was murdered on the night of July 20, last, on board the Joy line steamship Georgia, in Long Island Sound. One of the State officials of Rhode Island, Mr. Coroner Gifford of Little Compton, has just got around to rendering his verdict, Coroner Gifford finds, in brief, that Mrs. Nickerson was assaulted, killed and thrown overboard into the Sound.

The Sunday AMERICAN has been busy for the past seven days seeking to find out what the Joy line proposes to do about the Nickerson case. The murder of this Boston woman seemed to be in a fair way of passing quietly into history as one of New England's "mysteries" when the Sunday AMERICAN became active.

To-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN will contain all that the officials of the Joy line are prepared to say to the public of New England at this time. The Sunday AMERICAN will also have an interview with Mr. Gifford, who will explain why more than three months were allowed to pass between the discovery of the murder and the publication of the coroner's verdict.

Just the Plain Facts.

The Nickerson story to the Sunday AMERICAN to-morrow will be the talk of all New England on Monday and for many days to come. There has been no attempt on the part of this newspaper to make it sensational. The editors and reporters who have had the story in charge for several days received no other instructions than to "get the facts." They have endeavored to get them. In presenting to the people of New England the result of this investigation the Sunday AMERICAN believes that it is performing a great public service.

There will be other important stories in the Sunday AMERICAN. From no other Sunday newspaper, for instance, can you get the story of "Briggs." Briggs is a bandit in the town of Bridgewater, Vt., not many miles from White River Junction. Its population has dwindled away with every decade until to-day it is next to nothing. Briggs is held by some to be one of the "frightful examples" of the New England down-at-heel village. Others take the view that Briggs has been deserted because of its isolation, because it ought never to have been a village, because the people owed to themselves and their children to move to other towns where living conditions are more favorable.

The Sunday AMERICAN sent Mr. Frank Dallam up to find out about Briggs. Mr. Dallam tells his story of Briggs in the Sunday AMERICAN. Mr. Dallam is one of the best newspaper writers in the United States. His special stories are to be a feature of the Sunday AMERICAN for some time to come.

Hark "Annexes Boston."

The impression seems to have gone abroad that as one result of last Tuesday's election the town of Hyde Park has been "annexed to Boston." That was merely the Boston idea. Got in Hyde Park itself they have not stirred that notion. In the Sunday AMERICAN Mr. Harleigh B. Schultz and Mr. John Kilduff will give you Hyde Park's idea of annexation. A delightful treatment of a new subject.

You must have noticed that the Socialists appear to be very much cheered by Socialistic victories here and there on Tuesday all over the country. In Rhode Island the Socialists elected the first of their number to take a seat in the Assembly. The Sunday AMERICAN will introduce this Rhode Island Socialist to the rest of New England. At the same time Miss Gertrude L. Marvin submits an important interview with one of the leaders of the Socialistic organization in Massachusetts.

And a Great Deal More.

These are only a very few of the big news features of the best Sunday newspaper in New England, one of the most successful Sunday newspapers in the world. In addition, those who like a little fun at the expense of the week are likely to find it in the further adventures of the Katzenjammer children, the discovery that Howard Scott's Cousin Willie is some juggler, and the report that the Thompson's "Dummy" has begun to take notice of the girls.

The magazine section will be a newspaper all to itself. The editorial section will be up to its usual high standard.

In one word, if you spend the Sunday in New England you MUST have the Sunday AMERICAN. We'll warn the safe side you would better say a word now to your newsdealer.

FIND NEW RICHESON WITNESS

The Cambridge police have located a woman, after a search of several days, who declares that the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson and Avis Linnell used to come to her house frequently. The authorities, who are closely guarding the name of the woman, declare she is positive of the identity of the man and says woman who she says often called at her home and remained several hours.

While the defence has been busy seeking a woman in the western part of the State and a young girl who has been studying music in Boston as witnesses bearing on the character of the girl, the government has been conducting a similar inquiry. The prosecution expects to make an important witness out of the woman it has just located.

Attorney John L. Lee is expected back in Boston from the South in a few days, so the arraignment of Pastor Richeson is set for next Monday. It is probable that the members of the minister's family, who returned home after calling on him in the Charles street jail, may also come back here soon.

Attorneys William A. Morse, Robert O. Harris and Philip N. Dunbar have been busy the past few days going over their evidence and receiving the reports of their special investigators. The latter are understood to have unearthed information that is expected to have an important bearing on the fight for the life of the accused minister.

"To say that the trial will be one of the most startling that has taken place in New England for years would only be telling what everybody knows," said Attorney Morse to-day. "The jury will finally decide who was guilty of the crime, if crime there was, and they will hear both sides of the case."

The Rev. Mr. Richeson maintains his courage and good spirit in jail and is ready for his appearance in court on Monday. The date of the trial will be set on the day of arraignment and the defendant is eager to face the jury as soon as possible.

THIS NUMBER WILL CUT SOME FIGURE FOR A WHOLE DAY

GET YOUR ONES READY TO-DAY

Eleven, eleven, nineteen eleven!

No! Tais is not a football or a class yell, but merely to-day's date written out in full.

Today is the 11th day of the 11th month of the 11th year of the century, and the date may therefore be written "11-11-1911."

Eight letters, all out one, once!

But we can do even better than that, for if there is anyone whose sense of symmetry and of the fitness of things is marred by the presence of a nine in the series of elevens it is possible to further economize pen, ink and paper and write the date "11-11-11."

It will be a century before the same thing can be done on November 11, 2011, though, of course, on December 12, next year, there will be a close approximation to it with 12-12-12 as a correct presentation of the date.

CARDINAL SAILS ON CANOPIC

The most distinguished passenger on the White Star liner Canopic when she sails from her dock in Charlestown to-day for Naples and Genoa is Cardinal William H. O'Connell of Boston, who is on his way to Rome to attend the solemn consistory on November 27 at which he is to be formally elevated to the purple rank as a member of the Sacred College.

Cardinal O'Connell's suite, the Rev. Dr. P. J. Supple, Rev. Joseph F. Coppinger, private chaplain; Right Rev. Dr. M. J. Splaine, Right Rev. Edward J. Merriarty and Right Rev. Jeremiah E. Milbeck. Hundreds of members of Catholic organizations will be at the pier to tender the Cardinal their farewell greeting and wish him a safe and pleasant voyage. Members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Sailors' Club and the Catholic Alumni Society meet in Charlestown to tender the Cardinal a farewell.

Many clergymen of the Archdiocese are also on the Canopic's list. They are on their way to Rome to attend the impressive services at the consistory. Among them are the Rev. J. W. Hickey of Beachmont, the Rev. G. L. Locke of Bristol, R. I., the Rev. William O'Brien of Lowell, the Rev. John Gilday of Lawrence, the Rev. Nathaniel Merritt of Medford, the Rev. J. J. Holland of Maplewood, the Rev. Z. T. McNichols of New York, Sister Salome of Montreal and Mo De Lacs, director of the choir at the Cathedral.

The Canopic has a record passenger list, she had eighty saloon, eighty-five second cabin and 1,450 storage passengers.

First From New England.

Archbishop O'Connell will be the first New Englander to be admitted to the Sacred College, though Bishop Cheverus, the first incumbent of the Boston See, who ruled Boston for eighteen years and became an American citizen, was created a Cardinal after his return to France.

The ceremony is simple. When all is ready the Holy Father, accompanied by his suite, will come to the historic hall and pronounce aloud the names of each of the seventeen new Cardinals. There will be little else. The new princes of the church will be congratulated and await the conferring of the beretta, the first symbols of their new dignity.

It is planned in the case of Cardinal O'Connell that His Eminence and suite will later in the day go to the North American College. In the chapel of the college where Cardinal O'Connell was a rector, the ceremony of the conferring of the beretta will take place. All Americans in Rome are expected to be present at this ceremony, as only ecclesiastics are admitted to the private consistory.

On November 30, in either the Hall of Consistory or in St. Peter's itself, the ceremony of the conferring of the red hat will take place, whereupon the new Cardinals will be fully privileged to act with the Sacred College, the Senate of the church.

Large Party Sailing.

It is expected that many will go to the White Star docks to see the Cardinal off, sailing on the Canopic to-day with him will be a number of priests going to Rome to witness the ceremonies. Many of the laity, too, plan the voyage, and altogether there will be quite a number of New Englanders in Rome on November 27.

Many Catholic organizations will have delegates and committees at the pier to bid the party bon voyage, and the Catholic Alumni Society will have the Catholic Sailors' Club of Charlestown open through out the forenoon as a place where committees can meet and then proceed to the dock in a body.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Charlestown will have charge of the Sailors' Club house during the day, and will and in every possible way to facilitate the work of the committees.

ENGLISH HEIRESS WHO HELPS RAISE HENS AT LENOX

Mrs. George Westinghouse, Jr., who has joined husband in poultry raising for profit.

LENOX, Nov. 11.—George Westinghouse, Jr., and his bride, who was Miss Violet Evelyn Brocklebank, daughter of Sir Thomas and Lady Brocklebank, have gone into poultry raising as a means of a livelihood. Soon after their marriage in England two years ago, they came here to lead the simple life, although the senior Westinghouse is heavily interested in one of the largest manufacturing concerns in the world.

The Westinghouses have bought from W. L. Nye, proprietor of the Crystal poultry yards in Lee, two pens of birds for $1,600 and have let contracts for the largest henneries and biggest incubators in western Massachusetts. They are dead in earnest and expect to make a fortune.

				CARL ISLE

By TED PARKE.

Once again the Redskins take the warpath in the Stadium, and this afternoon, at 2 o'clock sharp, Harvard and Carlisle play their first game since 1908. Carlisle is the strong favorite for this game for two reasons.

The first is her record this year, the Indians having met and defeated a number of strong teams with ease, the Quakers going down before her onslaught last Saturday 16 to 0. But there is a more potent reason.

HARVARD WILL PLAY SUBS.

Coach Haughton has announced that he will play a team of subs this afternoon, stating in addition that he had intended using his substitutes for this game, having made an announcement to the squad to this effect early in the season.

He said that the game was originally planned for this purpose, namely that of giving the subs a chance to show their stuff, and the Harvard stock thereafter take a bad tumble.

Although a second team will represent Harvard at the start of the game, Coach Haughton will doubtless hold his regulars in readiness to take up the sword in case it begins to look as though Harvard were getting the worst of the argument.

The substitutes this year are unusually weak, as compared with those of last season. Just why a sub team should be so far behind the varsity can only be explained by saying that Harvard did not have the second string material this year that she had last year or has had for a number of years in the past.

The fact still remains, however, that the team that will represent Harvard to-day, is perhaps 50 per cent. weaker along the line than the regular eleven.

Indians Have Had Good Season.

The Indians enter the battle decked with the laurels of many battlefields, and confident of their ability to once more put the Harvard eleven to rout. To cheer the Carlisle team in this altogether worthy aim, from the Indian standpoint, 100 Indian girls have journeyed all the way from the home town and they will do their part in supplying the moral stamina to down the Crimson.

There will doubtless be as large a crowd at the game to-day as at any of the other games still to be played this year. Seldom has there been such a large advance sale

GIRL PRISONER, POLICE DEFIED

Stephen J. Flanagan, a clerk in the shoe store of William L. Douglas & Co. at No. 635 Washington street, kept a squad of policemen at bay for nearly two hours early to-day, while he held a young woman a prisoner inside the store. The police tried every possible way of getting into the store without having to force an entrance, but to no avail. Flanagan held the key but refused to open the door until the young woman, who said she was Miss Madeline Mahler, twenty-one, of No. 107 Broadway, South Boston, threatened to give him a beating.

Flanagan was locked up and a warrent will be asked for in court to-day, charging him with unlawfully detaining Miss Mahler against her will. Flanagan is twenty-seven years old, a widower, and lives at No. 102 Heath street, Roxbury.

A crowd of more than two hundred persons watched the police in their efforts to get into the store and taxicabs and telephones played a prominent part in the proceedings. The crowd was angered at the conduct of Flanagan and if it had not been for the presence of the policemen he probably would have fared badly at their hands.

Sergeant William Flynn and patrolman Sullivan trying the doors of the stores along Washington street when they came to the shoe store. Sullivan was about to reach for the door knob when he caught sight of a man hiding behind a setting. He told the sergeant there were burglars in the store. Word was sent to the station house and a squad of policemen ordered out. A large crowd gathered and the store was surrounded.

The man arose from behind the setting and Sullivan recognized him as Flanagan, a clerk employed in the store. Sullivan asked Flanagan to open the door. The latter refused and held up a key for the door at the same time pouring out a torrent of language.

ROB HOTEL OF CASH REGISTER

A cash register containing $46 was stolen from the office of the Hotel Royal at No. 142 Court street, West End, early to-day, during the absence of Night Manager William Melsane, and the entire police force of the city are searching for it.

The robbers are believed to have employed a team to carry away the register. Every doorway and alleyway within three blocks of the hotel has been searched, but no trace of the register found.

Manager Melsane cannot explain its disappearance. He told the police he left the office for about ten minutes to go to a room on the second floor. The register was on the edge of a counter nothing to the hotel office. Abraham Shapiro, a guest, on his way out of the hotel a few minutes later asked Melsane what had become of the cash register. The manager called the bell boys and questioned them but they said they had seen nobody enter or leave the hotel during the manager's absence.

W. L. is thought the robbers took cash register and all rather than run the risk of awaking somebody in the hotel by pressing one of the keys and opening the money drawer to secure the loot. If they had been on foot they could not have gone very far without being held up by some policeman as every stationhouse in the city was notified of the robbery within 30 ten minutes after it happened.

COLD WAVE EASTWARD BOUND, DUE SUNDAY

The cold wave which has prevailed in the Northwest for the last two or three days, is slowly moving eastward, and is expected to make itself felt here Sunday. It was to-day confined to the Dakotas, Wyoming, Montana and Northwestern Canada, the coldest spot on the entire weather map being Calgary, Canada, where 12 below zero was the reading. Sheridan, Wyo., and Helena, Mont., recorded figures of 4 and 8 below respectively.

ROBBED BY PAIR AT GUN POINT

Thomas Mack, of No. 45 Union street, Lawrence, was held up and robbed at the point of a revolver by two men early to-day on what is believed to have been the Northern avenue bridge. Mack told the police he had been robbed on a bridge, but where it was he could not remember. It is thought he may have been dragged before the robbery.

Mack said he met some men in a North End hotel and they suggested taking a walk. They walked about along the waterfront for about two hours, when they came to the bridge.

They started to cross the bridge in the direction of South Boston, when one of the men seized Mack by the throat and placing a revolver at his head, commanded him to throw up his hands. The other man went through Mack's pockets, taking a gold watch and chain and $10. Both men fled, telling Mack that if he reported the robbery they would kill him.

Mack ran across Patrolman John T. Farrell of the Court Square Station on Atlantic avenue, and told him of the robbery. Farrell went with him to the station house. The Northern avenue bridge was then searched.

Patrolman Hale took Mack to the hotel in the North End and told him to take him over the same route he had traveled with the men who had held him up. Mack went but a short distance when he became lost. He continually complained of a pain in his head.

Mack described the robbers as being about twenty-seven years old and of medium build. They were light overcoats.

MYSTERY DEATH FROM CYANIDE

Medical Examiner Magrath and the police continued their investigations yesterday into the death of David F. Danforth, seventeen years old, of No. 32 Alpine street, Roxbury, by cyanide of potassium poisoning at the supporting plant at No. 84 Arch street, where he was employed. Whether the death was accidental or suicidal is not known, but it is believed by Danforth's friends that he took a sniff of the deadly drug and then, realizing what he had done, ran to a coffee can (hardware) and drank. After he had taken a drink Danforth collapsed across his bench. He was laid upon the floor, his clothes loosened and artificial respiration attempted by fellow workmen, but all efforts to revive him were of no avail.

Manager Frank Hendry attempted to resuscitate the boy with a pulmotor, but also failed to respond to the treatment. Word was sent for an ambulance, the hoisting at the Arch street plant was stopped and a search for the young boy's relatives was started.

After the ambulance had left David Danforth's body was taken to Danforth's home, and as it was fully decided to send out a call for the coroner, it was not until after this action was made known to the coroner's office that it was decided to send for Medical Examiner Magrath. Danforth's body will be taken to the morgue in Roxbury this afternoon, and Medical Examiner Magrath will perform an autopsy on the body.

Whether Danforth had been playing with cyanide and took a drink under the impression that it was water, or whether he had deliberately taken his own life, could not be learned last night.

THE STORY

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Novak! Novak! Novak! Has one been seen?

It was the great, though diminutive, prima donna. Mlle. Emma Trentini. She was looking for Caruso. Caruso was in a remarkable collection of cages and exhibited much. She had been asking again if the big red head of the merry Neapolitan tenor had been seen.

There is a cake of soap, I am? screamed the prima donna, while she was around in circles.

Downstairs, on guard, the detectives were looking for the prima donna as darting south and east and west, north and west.

"Is Miss Emma Caruso in here?" Gasped what you call out?—arrogance, eat at thought. I no longer want to marry such a bum grand valse. I spent one hour first! Bah!

And all on account of a cake of soap. First I'm a pig, the pencil, which was the cartoon, said now it is the cake of soap, and so on.

It is settled that Mlle. Emma Trentini and Enrico Caruso are not going to be married. Never! Never!

Caruso had left sixty or so much over since the interval in which he was in jail. He was quite positive about it.

Trentini did not see him in jail. She seemed to be positive that she had dressed herself and left the hotel before the police arrived. Both say that they were in bed when they were in bed, and the cadenza as well. Both are positive as well.

Caruso is the author of the pencil duel. He left a New York hotel for Atlantic City, but in a New York hotel for Atlantic City. Trentini left a New York hotel for Atlantic City, but in a New York hotel for Atlantic City. Caruso refused to be left without a pencil in the hotel in Atlantic City, but in a New York hotel in Atlantic City. Trentini was held up to ridicule, and showed no sense of humor. The remainder of her time in a women prison was spent in writing letters to the newspapers.

The unfavorable local note a day of Caruso's stay in Chicago was struck by the newspaper boys, who, in spite of the efforts of the police to suppress and shadow, stuck one of the latter's pencils in the left temple of the tenor.

PRESS PRAISED BY SCHOOL MEN

Publicity and a close connection between the school superintendents and the local press was advocated by William H. Allen, a director of the Bureau of Municipal Research of New York, at a meeting of the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents.

Mr. Allen contended that the public has a right to know all that is going on in the schools and declared there had been a lot of unnecessary and unjustifiable secrecy and thereby by school authorities about the business of newspapers.

Stratton D. Brooks, of the local schools, disagreed with some of Mr. Allen's contentions, but he praised the press of Boston for its attitude toward the schools, declaring that it had been an active agent of betterment in the meeting of the needs of the community in recent years.

Dr. Brooks said that the press has a right to know the facts regarding the management of the schools, and those facts should be given out readily presented to them.

"There has been a lot of trouble regarding the publication of school matters," he said, "but I never had the least trouble with any of the newspapers. If any criticism has been published it has been fair and just. I have been a friend of the school superintendent."

Rev. Edward H. Rouse, who conducted the Boston Latin School for many years, and Miss Stearns, could not unconditionally endorse Mr. Allen's contentions. Mr. Rouse said that he had had considerable trouble with newspaper reporters in the by the public newspaper reporters in the by the public newspaper reporters in the by the public

ACCUSE BOY OF ROBBING HOUSE

Fourteen-year-old Glen H. Sturgeon will be arraigned in the juvenile court in Somerville, charged with breaking and entering and larceny of $2 from the home of Waldron B. Sellars, No. 80 Hudson street, that city.

The boy lives with his aunt, Alice E. Twomley, who occupies the upper portion of the house from which the money was stolen. The robbery took place during the absence of the Sellars family. When they returned they found that a panel in a pantry door had been cut out.

The Sturgeon boy at first denied he had seen a man escaping from the pantry window and gave a description of him to the police say. The boy was accused of having broken into the house and committed the larceny, and then was arrested.

The police say he admitted he entered the front door and in order to divert suspicion from himself cut the panel and invented the story he first told the police.

NEW WILL IN OLE BULL CASE

ALFRED, Me., Nov. 11.—A new will has been found in the famous Mrs. Ole Bull will contest. It is dated June 2, 1902, and has been filed for probate here. This new phase of the case may reopen the interesting case in which Mrs. Bull's belief in mystic Hindu faith was a startling feature. It was supposed that the matter had been settled by a compromise several weeks ago directly after the death of Mrs. Bull's daughter.

The new will was filed by Charles K. Cobb of Boston, representing the surviving executors, who are Joseph H. Thorpe of Cambridge, brother of the deceased widow of Ole Bull, the Norwegian violinist, and Josephine Macleod of Stone Ridge, N. Y.

The will, which appears to be in the handwriting of Mrs. Bull, and signed by her, gives practically the entire estate to Mrs. Ole Bull Vaughn, a daughter, who recently died.

In this latest instrument, which is dated January 2, 1902, Joseph G. Thorp of Cambridge, Mass., a brother of Mrs. Bull, is given but $1,000, while in the wills presviously presented in the court heretofore the entire estate was left to Thorp and the relatives. The other documents were dated in 1902, 1900 and 1910 respectively. They were drawn up after the agreement entered into by which Mrs. Vaughn was given practically what she had, still presented decrees.

It is understood that the latest will to be presented was found recently among private papers in the offices of Gunther & Co., bankers, of London and Calcutta, where it had apparently lain undisturbed for the past ten years.

By the terms of the will there are a few small legacies who were not taken care of in the agreement reached in the early Summer. The matter will come before the court for a hearing on December 5.

In the contest for the first will presented here letters were declared to have had been sent to Mrs. Bull by Hindu friends and sisters in a monastery in India. Startling testimony was given of mystic rites observed in the monastery, Mrs. Bull's home of Mrs. Ole Bull.

Estate Worth $300,000.

Mrs. Bull's latest will was presented in the York County Probate Court at Biddeford, February 8. She left an estate valued at $300,000, the greater part of which was bequeathed to her daughter, Olea Bull Vaughan of Cumaraga, Minn.

The trial of the will contest began here May 16, in the course of which Blanche L. Whipple, Mrs. Vaughan's attorney, said that Mrs. Bull surrounded herself with a bodyguard as a protection against the imagined malignant mind magnetism of a woman once a member of her household. She believed, Mr. Whipple said, that this woman could transmit thoughts from a great distance which would cause illness and death.

A contrary influence, Mr. Whipple said that Mrs. Bull invited to visit her Indian swamis, or priests, who appealed to her imaginative mind. She was induced to go to India upon their suggestion, Mr. Whipple stated. Here are the letters to support his claim that Mrs. Bull was of disturbed and disordered mind.

Her daughter, Mrs. Vaughan, was not permitted to see her mother in Mrs. Bolfe's last illness, the lawyer alleged, and during the trial it was shown that Mrs. Vaughan was not in sympathy with her mother's predilection for Buddhism.

Paid Hindoo An Annuity.

Mrs. Bull contributed $5,000 annually for three years to Dr. Bose, a Hindoo, of Calcutta. Late in 1906 Nirendra Bedorick came from Italy to testify in the case. He arrived in Boston a few years ago as a barber, went to Mrs. Bull's Camden home as a guest, and after that worked there. He described seances and explained the beliefs of those who attended them.

Attorney Whipple named persons who were involved in the psychical conspiracy that mainly influenced Mrs. Bull in disposing of those large sums. Mr. Whipple were Miss Margaret E. Noble, who is Sister Nivedita of India; Mrs. Sarah Dr. Jagendis Chunder Bose and Mrs. Dr. Jagadis Bose.

Bullock also testified that Miss Sarah J. Farmer, who is the head of a Brooklyn school to which students journeyed to discuss occultism, was so unbalanced mentally that she was at times tied in a room in Mrs. Bull's home. Mrs. Bull's brothers, Thomas, Mrs. Edith Swanander, a Brooklyn school teacher, who was a guest in the Camden and Greenacre, testified that Mrs. Bull told her of strange visions.

Mother and Daughter Kept Apart.

Mr. Whipple read letters to show the filial affection of Mrs. Vaughan for her mother and Mr. Thorp admitted that he used his influence in keeping her away from her mother in the latter part of her life, but that he did so because it was the expressed wish of Mrs. Bull.

The case continued to occupy the attention of the court in Alfred during the month and in addition to the examination of a number of witnesses, including Mr. Thorp, various letters were read to show the relations between Mrs. Bull and Mrs. Vaughan's affection for her mother.

$25,000,000 GIFT FROM CARNEGIE

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Andrew Carnegie's presentation of $25,000,000 in 5 per cent bonds to the Carnegie Corporation of New York, which will then administer his beneficent activities, brings his total gifts to the sum of $222,900,000. This places him $46,080,000 ahead of John D. Rockefeller in gifts for public and charitable purposes. Rockefeller's total is $174,713,000.

By its charter the new corporation is authorized "to promote the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States." It will carry on the work of founding libraries and endowing colleges after Mr. Carnegie's death.

The new corporation, created its charter under a bill introduced in the last legislative session at Albany by Senator Frawley, Mr. Carnegie issued the following statement explaining what he had done and what he hoped to accomplish by it:

Carnegie Explains Plans.

"The purposes of the corporation, as stated in the charter, are as follows:

"'Section 1—Andrew Carnegie, Elihu Root, Henry S. Pritchett, William N. Dubois, Cleveland H. Dodge, Robert A. Taylor, Robert A. Franks, James Bertram, and their successors, are hereby constituted a corporation under the name of The Carnegie Corporation of New York, for the following purposes, namely: Founding, building a fund or funds and applying the income thereof to and for the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States, by aiding technical schools, institutions of science, libraries, useful publications, and other agencies now existing or that may hereafter be founded appropriate thereto.'

"The incorporators named at Mr. Carnegie's house, accepted the charter, adopted the constitution and by-laws and elected the following officers: Andrew Carnegie, vice-president, Elihu Root; treasurer, Robert A. Franks; secretary, James Bertram.

"Mr. Carnegie transferred to the corporation for its corporate purposes, $25,000,000 par value first mortgage gold bonds of the United States Steel Corporation.

Pritchett Aids Work.

Since retirement from active leadership in the corporations he organized Mr. Carnegie has devoted himself almost exclusively to philanthropic activities. Although in possession of health that has been unusually robust for several years, Mr. Carnegie, former head of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, recently became president of the Carnegie foundation for the advancement of teaching; Mr. Frew is president of the board of trustees of the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburg; Mr. Woodward is president of the Carnegie Institution at Washington; Mr. Taylor is president of the Hero Fund Commission; Elihu Root has been Mr. Carnegie's counsel to some extent in the Dunfermline trust endowment.

In one attempt recently made to consecrate all of Mr. Carnegie's gifts required by the terms of the sanitary type of trust and was still incomplete. It showed that his gifts of libraries alone have amounted to hundreds of cities in forty-four States of the Union, in England, Scotland, New Zealand, Tasmania and the West Indies, making possible the erection of 2,811 monuments around the world to a man who some sixty years ago began his industrial career as bobbin boy in a cotton factory.

Mr. Carnegie's good recent activities have been a gift of $10,000,000 to aid international peace endowment, extension of his gifts to Italy in the Netherlands and Norway with large gifts, and very recently the gift of $2,000,000 additional to his native city, Dunfermline, Scotland.

$25,000,000 GIFT FROM CARNEGIE

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 11.—The shooting here of Captain William J. Delaney of Mount Pleasant, Westmoreland, N. G. P., Chie of Police here, which was at first thought to be suicide, is rapidly developing into what is believed by many to be a murder.

Dulaney was shot while calling on Miss Ada Lennox, who with her mother, Mrs. Rose Lennox, has been committed to jail pending an inquest next Tuesday by the coroner. The dead man's home is only a few doors away. His wife and five children were at home and asleep when the shooting occurred.

Miss Lennox says that Dulaney called at her home at 11 o'clock Thursday night. About 2 o'clock Friday morning, she says, he suddenly drew a revolver and announced his intention of shooting himself. Miss Lennox says she screamed. Dulaney quieted her, telling her he would go to his own home and do the shooting. The young woman says she took the revolver away from him and placed it on a table.

After a while the two talked and Dulaney recovered the revolver, replacing it in his pocket. Suddenly he drew the revolver again and threatened to kill both her and herself. Mrs. Rose Lennox, Charles L. Woodward, Charles L. Taylor, Robert A. Franks, James Bertram, and their successors, are hereby constituted a corporation under the name of The Carnegie Corporation of New York, for the following purposes, namely: Founding, building a fund or funds and applying the income thereof to and for the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States, by aiding technical schools, institutions of science, libraries, useful publications, and other agencies now existing or that may hereafter be founded appropriate thereto.'

GIBLIN FIGHTS WITH BOTTOMLEY

Politicians all over the city are eagerly discussing the attempt by Thomas J. Giblin of Ward 1, East Boston, to rise up the assault on his record by the Good Government Association by whipping the organization's secretary, Robert J. Bottomley.

Mr. Giblin recently run for the Legislature. He was beaten. One reason, he claimed, for his defeat was that the association characterized him as:

"A persistent office-seeker without qualifications for representing his district in the Legislature. We advise his defeat."

Mr. Giblin met Mr. Bottomley, the association's secretary, on School street. Tuesday 8. Bell, once a member of the Board of Aldermen, the State Senate, the School House Commission and a few other things and himself a candidate for the House from Ward 2 in last Tuesday's election, was with him.

What happened is variously told. Most accounts agree that Mr. Giblin reached toward Mr. Bottomley's face rather suddenly and rapidly. Who he struck first the same way two or three times more. Mr. Giblin says he struck first and travelled the full distance, but the police pictures do not support it that way.

Mr. Bottomley said:

"My intention was to get to the story in circulation concerning a meeting between Giblin, Mr. Bell, Mr. Bottomley and myself in front of City Hall on Tuesday morning. I was told that Mr. Giblin attempted to assault me. Ex-Alderman Thos. S. Bell, who was present, stepped between us. I said to Mr. Giblin, 'Don't make any charge in writing like this.' The assault was absolutely and unexpected.

Mr. Giblin puts the blame up to Mr. Bottomley. He says:

"The trouble came when I accused Mr. Bottomley of changing one of my speaking facts in order to defeat me. I told him that he was not to do that, because one of my opponents was very intimate with Bottomley and that he was the trouble bogus.

"How does Bottomley know my qualifications? Has he ever held an examination of the candidates?

"I never drank a drop of liquor in my life. I live as good a home life as any man in Boston politics.

"The people of East Boston have the measure of the Good Government Association. They always are opposed to East Boston candidates. There are few millionaires in East Boston. They are plain democratic people over there.

"They throw the likes of Bottomley overboard."

DR. FARREL FIRST IN MAYORALTY FIGHT

Dr. George L. Farrell, regarded all along as a dark horse, is the first Malden mayoralty candidate to file nomination papers, there are six candidates for the office. The other candidates are Thomas F. Riley, Frank E. Costello, Wilbur F. Hill, chairman of the Board of Aldermen, and Frank P. Clapp.

MISS ELDER FOR WOMAN'S VOTE

Claims of the Anti-Suffragists that the right to vote is not a natural or inherent one were riddled by Miss Margaret Foster of Winchester, daughter of Samuel J. Elder, a Vassar graduate, in the third lecture in the Equal Suffrage Study Course of the Massachusetts Women's Suffrage Association.

Miss Elder, who is an A. B., Vassar, spoke on "Woman Suffrage and Democracy" and dealt with the Anti-Suffragist claim that the fathers of this country ever contemplated a general suffrage but a restricted right to vote. In part she said:

"The inherent rights of man belong to him completely only in a state of nature. For the benefits of organization he surrenders certain of his natural rights and enters into a 'social contract' with his fellows. Government, then, is a social contract whose authority rests solely in the consent of the governed.

"Government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed. From this general principle it follows that taxation without representation is tyranny. Here were the great overthrows which pounded in the idea of democracy and swept the colonists into assertion of their rights as English citizens and their rights as men.

"But the anti-suffragist claims that the right to vote is not a natural and inherent one, that the ballot is a privilege given to certain selected members of society, because the end is not individual but social good, and that individual rights are lost and void where they conflict with the great purpose of a nation and its social and political welfare. They claim that the colonists never expected and expressly opposed representation in Parliament, and that voting has nothing to do with taxation.

A True Democracy.

"The claims of the anti-suffragists are indication of ill-digested development of modern political science, showing a lack of understanding of the great reinforcements to the theory of democracy which have appeared during the last century.

"Modern democracy is based on the recognition, not only scientific, but by the man on the street and the politician in office, that will, is the basic and determining factor today. A fine democracy aims to find out what is the will of the people and it believes that the will of the people is a good will. It is formed of a meshed of faith in people and in 'the people.' Sovereignty then, is the will of all the people.

"So that the first duty of the State is to find the aggregate good will. And in doing this all normal members of the State must be called to their wishes, their register their will, or society will fail in its first duty to discover the will or will of the people and it believes or, in other terms, this good will or again will prevail.

"But not only this. It is true that modern thought no longer believes that man in his natural state is free, that without organization he is at liberty. This is what was in the minds of the framers when they wrote of the inalienable rights of man, and this is the faith which modern thought has outgrown and this growth is what the anti-Suffragists claim is true as far as voting is not an inherent and natural right.

"The colonists did oppose an ingrained liberty to become a part of the English Parliament. They claimed that they were responsible directly to the King and that they should be taxed only through their own representative assemblies.

Ballot Not Limited.

"Modern thought says: 'No, the truth is that, except in the case of nature is not free; that on the contrary it is logically true and may be historically demonstrated that liberty is the result of individual liberty'—that we obtain liberty by the organization of the state and its institutions. Man by nature is social and only in the institution of the state can he obtain his freedom and his individual rights.

"If all this modern thought be true, then it's great interest is fundamentally the need and the right of the individual, as a social being, to become a part of this organization, not only the need and the right of the individual but the need of and the right to the State that every responsible and self-governing unit should become a member of the organization. Liberty and order can all may only be liberty and freedom together.

"Thus not only through the membership of each normal unit can the highest social good be attained and that fewer is no conflict between the right and interest of the individual and the true purposes of our Nation and its social and political welfare.

"The modern idea that taxation has nothing to do with voting is because our forefathers have insisted that voting shall not be limited to taxpayers only."

A NOBLE RECORD

Of many hundreds of thousands of cures forms a well sustained basis for every claim put forth by the makers of DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY as a remedy for many of the troublesome affections which afflict mankind; yet it is not extolled as a "cure-all" by any means. No extravagant promises are flaunted before the public to arouse false hopes in the afflicted. Your neighbors probably know of some of its many cures; ask them.

Through strengthening and arousing the stomach, liver and bowels into vigorous action, digestion is promoted, whereby the blood is enriched and purified, disease-producing bacteria destroyed and expelled from the body, and thus a long list of skin, scrofulous and kindred affections are overcome and sound, vigorous health established.

The "Discovery" contains no alcohol and no habit-forming drugs, and has its every ingredient printed on its wrappers. This OPEN PUBLICITY places it in a class distinct from the ordinary secret nostrums with which it has no relationship. Physicians, therefore, do not hesitate to prescribe it in bad cases of indigestion, torpid liver or biliousness and in skin and blood affections. People of intelligence and keen discernment employ it. "The "Discovery" is a pure glyceric extract of native medicinal roots of great curative potency, and can in no case do harm to either child or adult. The aged find it a great invigorator.

BURNS SILENCED ON M'NAMARAS

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.—Judge Bordwell again refused to-day to discuss a report that he intended to put a silencer on William J. Burns, head of the Burns Detective Agency, for talking too much about the McNamara case, but he did not deny the report.

"I was not occasioned to discussing any phase of a case before me," said the judge, smiling, "but do not misunderstand me. You are free to draw an inference from what you have heard, what you know of the circumstances and from the fact that I prefer not to discuss them."

Judge Bordwell had complained to the District Attorney about the advertising methods of detective Burns, which, he said, were making it so difficult to obtain unprejudiced jurors. When the judge heard of Burns' recent discussion of the McNamara case in Indianapolis he feared that another dissertation on the guilt of the McNamaras might get into papers that would reach talesmen not yet examined, and promptly sent word to Burns' representative here to warn his chief to stop talking about the case. In addition Judge Bordwell asked that Burns be notified that the court wishes to interview him as soon as he reaches this city and before he begins to talk again.

Judge Blames Burns.

District Attorney Fredericks recently has had to listen to several private reprimands from Judge Bordwell on account of Burns' articles purporting to outline the prosecution's cases against the McNamara brothers. The judge blames Burns for prejudicing so many talesmen and is reported to have told Captain Fredericks that the detective had cost the county $12,000 since the trial opened by hindering the court in getting a jury. The court believes that if it had not sent for detective Burns's prominence in the case a jury would be empaneled now, and the taking of testimony under way.

Captain Fredericks also has a personal grievance against Burns, which is that Burns has been trying to monopolize all the credit for the prosecution. As he is a politician, the District Attorney has hoped to add to his prestige by the trial, but he thinks that Burns has set out deliberately to overshadow him. He apprehends that when the detective arrives here he will further exploit himself at the expense of the prosecution officers, as the captain intends to anticipate Burns and make a counter-move by eliminating him as a witness and also by minimizing the importance to the State of his investigations.

Clarence S. Darrow, counsel for the defence and the district Attorney have not made up yet office their hot discussion over John T. Wilson. Wilson had been called as a talesman. When he said he was closely associated with General Otis and Harry Chandler in land operations and was superintendent of a development company in which all were interested, Mr. Darrow asked the District Attorney to agree to excuse him. Captain Fredericks asked Mr. Wilson if his connections with General Otis and his son-in-law would influence him as a juror and he answered in the negative. Then the District Attorney announced that he considered Mr. Wilson as a competent juror.

Lawyers In Wrangle.

"This is manifestly unfair," said Mr. Darrow, "that we should not even be compelled to ask that the talesman be excused."

"Our ideas of unfairness differ," retorted Captain Fredericks. "Speaking of fairness, the defence put a man on that jury who hates General Otis. We could hardly agree on a definition of fairness."

"You are evidently not judging by your interpretation of it," snapped Mr. Darrow.

"I reveal the duplicities of unfairness," replied the captain, hotly. "I don't like it. Have I believed it when I said it and I have said it now," shouted the attorney for the defence.

With flushed cheeks, Captain Fredericks arose impulsively and said: "If there is anything personal in this matter we can settle it somewhere else," with a pugnacious gesture with his fist.

"There is nothing personal," Mr. Darrow called back, and then bellelting, he added, "but if there was we certainly could settle it outside."

Judge Secures Peace Again.

Judge Bordwell then projected his compromising personality into the ring and made the contestants be still, smiling benignly upon each inflamed countenance.

A seventh juror in the person of A. Gribling, a retired harness maker, was obtained.

CASCARETS FOR A SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Gently but Thoroughly Cleanse and Regulate Your Stomach, Liver and Bowels While You Sleep.

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means indigestion; a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they cure indigestion, because they immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended forever. A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

YALE IS PICKED TO BEAT BRUNONIANS IN BATTLE TO-DAY

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

INDIANS HAVE GOOD CHANCE TO DEFEAT HARVARD, SAYS HOBBS

BETTING EVEN ON INDIAN GAME

of tickets for an Indian game. This may be explained in several ways.

The Indians have not appeared here against Harvard for several years, so that the persons who like to see the Redskins play just because they are Redskins, have grubbed up every ticket in sight.

In addition to this there is a certain class of followers of the Harvard team, who cannot get tickets to the Dartmouth and Yale games. This contest to-day will be the last liner on which they therefore can go after tickets in full force.

Harvard was defeated by Princeton last week. There is another class of spectator who will go to the end of the earth to see Harvard beaten. They are going to-day because they feel that they will be able to see this edifying sight, and they will root themselves hoarse if Carlisle scores or does anything brilliant. These three classes, together with those who always see Harvard play, because of their loyalty to the team will pack the Stadium to the limit.

The line which Harvard puts on the field is far from a strong combination. That of Carlisle on the other hand is partly a veteran aggregation and the men are skilled and well seasoned in the playing of the game. Longaker, Newaske and Jordan in particular are strong men and will give their opponents all they can handle to-day, while every one of the Carlisle forwards are aggressive and powerful on the offense, and clever men and not to be boxed on the defense.

Harvard's forwards on the other hand are apt to put up a ragged game. The ends of the line are fast, and not much behind the first string backs as a matter of fact, so nothing need be feared on their score. Jenks has been pretty certain of a regular tackleship so that he can be depended upon to-day, but the other side tackle is not up to scratch. He is regularly a guard, but this year has been shifted to tackle and just how he will pan out can only be decided to-day.

One fact about Stow is a certainty. He is playing against Longaker, one of the best forwards in the Indian line. He will be lucky to get out of the game with his skin, and Carlisle will doubtless pick on him as the weak point of the Crimson line. Keays alongside of him, however, should help him out considerably, and the secondary defence of the Harvard team will stay in close to stop anything coming through left tackle.

Freedley Will Play Quarter.

Farnsworth is a good man at centre, although his passing is sometimes poor, while McGuire is an exceptionally fast man for his weight at guard.

Freedley will run the Crimson team and the practice to-day will be his good. He has a pretty clear head, is a quick thinker and all he needs is experience. This he will get in great chunks to-day, for he will find himself against one of the swiftest and trickiest teams in the country.

The Harvard backfield will be the same, with Reynolds a very fast man for a sub, and Bicknell doing the kicking. The latter is a very good punter, and if Thorpe, the Indian back, does not punt this year as he probably will not do, Bicknell should be able to boot the ball for a long way.

With their experience and the fact that they have been playing together all year, and with great confidence in their playing ability, because of the showing they made before all with large scores, the Indians forfeit all what the favorites for to-day's game.

They should put together the most formidable and best machine that the Harvard eleven has had in years. Their stepping the plunges the Harvard team would probably be able to cope with the situation but a fairly strong list of the sales are good defensive players at that. Also the Indians claim to have several thousand trick plays and dazzling formations up their sleeves which they will spring on the Crimson team.

Redskins Play Open Game.

It would not be at all surprising to see the Redskins get away for some long gains on trick formations, for they are not the ones to sting up plays of this kind as their superiors the regulars. However, as has been previously stated, Coach Vaughan will doubtless keep his regulars in readiness all times, and if the occasion requires Jim them in to stop the assault.

Many persons look for an easy Carlisle victory to-day, but this is not as apt to be forthcoming as one might suppose. Of course we admit that Carlisle is the favorite and it would not surprise us greatly to see the Indians win if Haughton does not see fit to risk any of his first string players to-day.

If the regular Harvard team were going into the game, many would not hesitate to predict a Harvard victory, but inasmuch as this is not the case, as far as is known, the Indians look stronger.

The subs have had some pretty hard work this week in preparation for this game, and it may be that this hard training will strengthen them for more than one know. For this reason it may be that the Crimson subs are underrated.

As to the comparative weight of the two teams. Carlisle will have the advantage over the Harvard line, even though the weight is about the same. The Indians are not as bulky as some of the Harvard players, their weight being evenly distributed and packed down, with the natural result that they are fast and aggressive. Now, aggressiveness is apt to be the fault of the Crimson forwards to-day.

Indian Backfield Very Best.

In the backfield the Indians will have the advantage, their backs being heavier and at the same time faster than those in the Harvard trio. This fact is going to give the Carlisle backs the power to get that has yet been played by the Crimson. The Indians won their game from Pennsylvania on the open style of football and while the Harvard players will probably be played by Carlisle to-day as last Saturday they will have no perplexity little betting on this game. Whispers have been wafted on the race, the writer of these lines giving the 10 to 8 on Carlisle, but these are mere whispers only and nothing can be done money appeared in connection with them. There have been a number of bets placed, however, at even money, and these have been made by Carlisle rooters, who are eagerly snapped up by Harvard backers will think and say when they learn that a not team is to be played, or that they conjecture. It is safe to say that they will not be a parrot follow in their expressions of opinion, for in one corner to turn a substitute team just because of his loyalty.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11.—Yale and Brown meet on Yale field this afternoon for their annual struggle on the gridiron, and the Yale coaches will send the team onto the field to seek revenge for the defeat which the Brown eleven handed to the Blue last season.

Both teams are in fine shape for a fast contest, and it is expected that fully 20,000 people will attend the game, as it is well known that the Brunonians have one of the hardest teams encountered out that institution.

Yale will send onto the field a set of backfields who have never played in a big collegiate football game. Dave Dunn, who will start the game at fullback, has played that position but three days in his life, while Ed Freeman, the right halfback, goes into the game with only one day's practice. Camp, the son of the great Yale football authority, has been playing halfback in practice since he made good with a vengeance in the West Point game.

Yale expects to win the game by a fairly large score, without being forced to reveal any of the plays which the team has been running in secret practice the past two weeks.

Brown comes to New Haven with a team that is much improved over the team that defeated Harvard two weeks ago, as Coach Koolmon has coached the men in the faults shown against Harvard and Brown fans feels confident that it will score and possibly beat the Elis.

The Brown team places much more hope on the ability of Captain Spalding and on the ends in using the forward pass, and on the ability of Spalding to kick field goals. The question is whether his teammates will be able to afford him the protection than was shown in the Harvard game.

So far as the season records is concerned both Yale and Brown have been beaten once, Brown going down before Harvard, and Yale by the same team after having run it a tie. The records show that the Brown team has crossed the Yale goal line in six of the fourteen games, which equals the record of Harvard and Princeton in crossing the Yale goal line.

HOW TO REACH THE HARVARD STADIUM TO SEE BIG GAME

Seven special trains will leave the South Station to-day for Allston to accommodate persons wishing to see the Carlisle Indian game in the Stadium. The trains will leave the South Station at 12:55 o'clock and at five minute intervals up to 1:30 o'clock.

After the game special trains will be run to the South Station and one train will be made up to go west bound over the Boston and Albany tracks to stop at all stations between Allston and South Framingham.

The Boston Elevated railroad will run extra cars to the game at minute intervals. The Stadium may be reached from any car reaching Harvard square for a few minutes walk down Boylston street. The field is only a few minutes from Allston car.

The Metropolitan Park Commission has granted permission for the use of the speedway on the days of the Carlisle, Dartmouth and Yale games, and an opening has been made in the iron fence, allowing pedestrians to enter Soldiers Field from the Speedway.

Those entering by the new gateway will be parked on Soldiers Field as usual, or may drive on the speedway to and between the Harvard boathouse and North Harvard street, passengers entering the field through the small gate opposite the boathouse.

MICHIGAN IS PICKED TO BEAT CORNELL

ITHACA, Nov. 11.—Michigan and Cornell will meet to-day for the first time since 1904. It will be the last game of the local season and the biggest played on the local gridiron since Princeton and Cornell broke up athletic relations. Thousands of exiled ones are here. Coach Yost and his team of Wolverines are accompanied by four hundred Michigan students and considerable money on the strength of the work of the Michigan eleven. Cornell expects its team to win however, as the players are all in fine condition and will enter the contest with the confidence of veterans. Both Snyder and Kyrich had considerable work yesterday at drop and held goal kicking.

VERMONT RUNNERS WIN FROM BOWDOIN

BRUNSWICK, Nov. 11.—The University of Vermont team won a five-mile cross-country run from Bowdoin after one of the most exciting contests of that nature that has ever been witnessed here. The score was 24 to 31. Captain Harry H. Hall of Bowdoin and Captain Frank Jones of Vermont entered Whittier field for the last quarter mile of the race neck and neck, Jones winning in the last 100 yards.

Hobbs Says Indians Have Good Chance with Harvard

By HENRY H. HOBBS.

Copyright by Boston American 1911. All rights Reserved.

The Harvard eleven received the first defeat of the year on Saturday, when Princeton on Osborne Field, S to 0.

It had been generally expected that the Brown game would give the Crimson a close, hard trying out—just such a contest as would show the real work of Haughton's men—but Brown fell far below expectations and it remained for the Princeton team, one week later, to show what the Harvard aggregation could do when opposed by a team fully its equal.

Harvard showed that its game is not at the present time invulnerable; that its line is not impregnable, and that the possession of a good defensive team although quite to gain ground in midfield, that the quarter situation is not reliable, and that Haughton's work of the past is not infinity good.

The hard Tiger game was the source of injuries to at least two of Harvard's regular men.

Will Feel Loss of Gardiner.

Gardiner was so severely injured that he will not be able to play again this year, which takes a good tackle away from Harvard's line. This is unfortunate for two reasons—first, Gardiner's work will be missed by Haughton, and the latter will be forced to make up the loss. Second, Gardiner gave indications of being one of the best backs of the year, and it is a great misfortune that he could not have finished out a season of well begun.

Potter at quarterback has injured his knee, but not same fault as Gardiner earlier in the season. As a result Potter will not go back into the game for some time, and meanwhile the eleven will be forced to go ahead in team development without him at the helm.

At this point of the season it is desirable to keep the same eleven constantly together as the means of securing confidence in each other.

Gardner, the first substitute quarter, did not appear reliable in handling kicks, or using the best judgment at times in ordering his attack.

Freely, who played in Gardiner's place after the latter became muddled because of the ankle being forced, did no better than his predecessors.

In justice to the latter it must be stated that Freedley, by being on the sidelines during the greater part of the game was not in the best position to observe to see just what plays were successful and those which were fruitless.

All in all the quarterback situation is the most trying for Haughton to solve.

Huntington Slow but Sure.

In the other backfield positions there is a favorable outlook. Nothing need to be said about Wendell's work. He has played high grade football since early in the season, and there is no question to believe that it will continue. Huntington was developed in the backfield to strengthen the defense and this was his supposition has been achieved. The running game is not Huntington's style, but his defensive work is all to be desired. His fullback is dependable and he is able to diagnose plays easily.

Campbell, when in good condition, is a dependable man in the open field and is the main reliance of Harvard's open running game. At the present time he is suffering from a muscle bruise received in the Princeton game and it would not be at all surprising if Reynolds, his substitute, should be given a show in the Carlisle game.

Reynolds is much the same type of player and zig-zag runs just outside of the tackle position have been his gains in advancing the ball.

The ends, Felton, Smith and O'Brien, are playing a very reliable game. "Phil" Felton, the star of the best, is the very best end, in the field this Fall. His end has not been outflanked in any game this year.

Felton, besides being no a par with O'Brien, has the much needed asset of being a good punter. His average from the Princeton game showed how weak Harvard is fixed for good kicking.

Vacant Position at Guard.

Hitchcock is coming along well at tackle, but is not as safety as he should be. He is the type of player who can learn easily and by the Yale game should show much improvement.

Should the change of Captain Fraser to tackle be permanent, Jenkins will probably get the vacant position at guard. He is a fast, aggressive, but is inexperienced compared with Fraser. Lengthened experience in position, has shown a considerable improvement in his playing, and he is generally allows his opponent to get the jump, with the result that he is being pushed back. His fault has been pointed out to him, and he should seem to lay in the fact that he is getting started and doesn't get his charge low enough.

Storer has been holding down center position, but has not shown signs of being equal to the passes. In the Williams game he has been three of his passes, instead of shooting through the air to the outstretched hands of the kickers, they went back.

In the last game, that with Amherst on a wet day, showed marked improvement. Last Saturday at Princeton his passes again showed signs of being weak. He lacks that accuracy and speed. If updated ability has been a considerable handicap to overcome, and unless this is done in the following games, when he will be hard pressed, he is apt to fizzle a pass at any time which will probably necessitate a result fatally.

It will be a very unusual thing if his poor passing does not have a demoralizing effect in his team's confidence.

Many Substitutes for Game.

Because of the injuries sustained last Saturday, and the general shaky condition of affairs at Cambridge it has been decided by Haughton and his advisers that they will not endanger their best material any more than possible for the Dartmouth and Yale games.

There will probably be several substitutes on the Harvard team when it goes against Carlisle at the Stadium.

It has been stated that they prefer if possible to sacrifice this game with the aim of sending the very best material into the last two games of the year.

If is not probable, however, that Harvard is courting defeat at the hands of Warner's Carlisle eleven. The difference between the ability or some of the regulars and their substitutes is so small that they will not be greatly handicapped in the Carlisle game. And so they will go into this game expecting to win and if the same fates trusting to fate that they will not be further crippled.

Carlisle comes to the Stadium with one of the best teams that has represented that institution for years. They have played eight games, all of which have been victorious. Last Saturday they easily defeated Penn, a team which defeated Villeh defeat was their third in succession.

The Indians have developed a fast, heavy well to Warner's superior the coaching. Although they have not met a really first-class team this year they should be able to hold Harvard from scoring consistently within their own territory.

Indian Backfield Fast.

Very little ground has been gained around the ends, and in their fast coated Penn's efforts amounted to nothing in this direction.

The tackles will probably sustain the heaviest attack from the Harvard backfield, as they are the weak spots in the line should one be discovered.

Thorpe will not play the game, and in work will be followed, so it is probable that Harvard will not see him in the game country. Welch, who played quarterback in the Penn game, resumed more brilliant playing.

The Indian backfield is extremely fast and will give Harvard a sterling ends as other aggressive. Captain Lone Star, gained as one of the best tackles of the season as well as a powerful player that his appearance against Harvard is very good.

The guards are considered somewhat unsettled and a few score seems likely with Harvard playing up to her best standard, victory should result, but the Harvard line is not to be counted on as an established and if the Indians profit by loose playing the chances for a large completion of affairs might be changed.

The Indians have been so slow at the Harvard organization has a good combined after the game of the season, Brown, which resulted in a defeat by the narrow margin of 3 points.

PRINCETON, Nov. 11.—The husky Dartmouth team from Hanover, N. H., strolls into the Princeton camp on Osborne field this afternoon and both teams feel confident of victory. One thing is almost certain, and that is that neither team will win from the other by more than twelve points.

Princeton is a slight favorite because of its victory over the Harvard team last Saturday but there are many who believe that Coach Cavanagh has a fast eleven and that so far this year has not shown its best plays. In the games that he has seen Green has not been forced to use many of the plays which he has in his repertoire, and as the team has been having secret practice behind closed gates for several weeks it is believed that many new trick plays will be sprung on the Tigers to-day.

The Green team will present nearly its first string line in this game, the only players who will not take part in the contest being Bell, at the star, halfback, and dropkicker and Bennett, the giant guard, who are out of the game with injuries. However, in the places of those two players will be substituted men nearly as good as the regulars.

Freelin, the first string quarter, will be back in the game and his presence should greatly aid the team as he runs the plays off rapidly and with smoothness. He is also a clever man at quarterback runs.

The Tigers are fit and ready for the game every first string man being in the game, every first string man being in the and Wight the star and. Both of these men have been out with injuries and will not be used before the Yale game.

The coaches have decided to use Pendleton at quarterback instead of Christie. The clever halfback has been running through signals with the subs all week and the coaches decided at the last minute to send him at that position instead of his regular position.

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., Nov. 11.—Wesleyan and Williams meet in their annual battle on Andrus Field to-day. The Wesleyan eleven has not won a game since 1905, but is confident that it can defeat the boys from the Berkshires in to-day's battle.

Interest in this year's game runs high. A small army of students will be accompanying the Williams team to the battlefield and sing the new college songs which they have been practicing for weeks in preparation for the big contest.

Both teams are primed for the contest. The hard work that the eleven and the boys through all week came to an end yesterday afternoon. Despite the fact that the Williams eleven has not won a game this year, it is confident of defeating the boys from the Nutmeg State. Last Saturday's fine showing against the Cornell team, which won 15 to 14, has injected new vigor into the team, and it will go after Wesleyan with renewed confidence. The Williams will go into the game a slight favorite in the betting. As has been the rule, the winner in former years is a general favorite, so when the two teams meet this afternoon the odds will be in favor of the Berkshire aggregation. To-day's game means much for both elevens, as last year's contest ended in a tie.

Captain Linder at Fullback.

Practically the same team that started against Cornell will be used in to-day's contest. Captain Linder of the Williams team will play fullback position, and much is expected of this. In all probability Nagle will start the game at right halfback. Fish will alternate with Nagle on the other side of the line.

Lewis will play quarterback. His clever generalship and kicking ability have been the feature of the Williams team all season, and he is practically assured of a place at the line-up to-day. Under the careful attention of Coach Fred Daly, who has paid more attention to the Blue than any other candidate this season, he has greatly improved in his work.

Rice and Vinal are the men selected by Coach Daly to start the game at the ends. Both are clever performers, and are sure to give a good account of themselves. Weston ends. There is still a doubt who will start at left guard, Mason and Bow having both showed up well during the week. It is probable that Mason will start the game at those positions. Anderson has been in fine physical condition for the game, so that there is no possibility of his not being in the line-up.

Ashenden will probably be selected to start at center, as he has been playing that position all season and both teams feel confident of victory. One thing is almost certain, and that is that neither team will win from the other by more than twelve points.

Princeton is a slight favorite because of its victory over the Harvard team last Saturday but there are many who believe that Coach Cavanagh has a fast eleven and that so far this year has not shown its best plays. BARRY WILL COACH HOLY CROSS NINE

WORCESTER, Nov. 11.—According to present plans the Holy Cross baseball team will take a southern trip next Spring. Jack Barry of the World's-Champion Athletics, a former Holy Cross star, will be on hand to help the squad in the indoor practice. In this year's nine will appear two men whom he has sent up to bat for positions, Robert and Joseph Murray of Philadelphia. Barry saw them play here and advised them to enter Holy Cross. Barry will be with the team until March 1.

NEW SPEED RECORD:
Fastest Long Distance Train in the World

The Great Northern Railway established a new record recently by making a run from Seattle to St. Paul with eight cars of silk and other merchandise in forty-five hours and sixteen minutes.

This is two hours and fourteen minutes faster than the fastest regular train (The Great Northern Fast Mail) in service between these terminals, and is thirteen hours and forty-four minutes faster than the fastest passenger train. A new coast-to-coast record (Seattle to New York) in conjunction with other lines was made possible through this great performance.

This remarkable record could only be made over a perfect road-bed. Ninety-pound rails, double rock in the mountains, gravel and rock ballast and block signals are the factors that enabled the Great Northern to do this, and to operate daily the Fast Mail—St. Paul and Minneapolis to Seattle—the fastest long distance train in the world.

This is the logical route over which to buy your tickets and ship your freight and express.

EXETER, Nov. 11.—The powerful football eleven of Andover and Exeter are in great shape for their big annual game here to-day. The contest should be close with the chances in favor of an Exeter victory.

Exeter has made a great record this season, defeating some of the strongest prep. schools teams in New England. Andover has likewise made an enviable record.

Andover will be a short and fast to-day, but this does not mean that it will go down to defeat. Andover has been a winner for the past six years and, even though it is not represented by an exceptionally strong team, it is liable to upset the "dope." Like Yale, Andover has a habit of rising to the front with a vengeance when the outlook is anything but bright. It has been this great fighting spirit which causes Exeter supporters to fear the outcome of to-day's battle.

A great crowd of football enthusiasts are in town in order to take in the festivities. Enthusiasm is rampant among the large crowd.

Andover-Exeter games are always well attended, and it is expected that a new record will be set to-day. A large number of graduates have come to this town from all parts of the country.

The only effect in the scene of great activity. The advance guard arrived in town last night, but when the early trains arrived from Boston this morning the streets soon began to fill. Old graduates were plentiful, and the early part of the day was passed in renewing old acquaintances.

This is the thirty-second annual battle between these teams. Andover has won seventeen games, and Exeter has won eleven, and three have been tie battles. For the past six years Andover has proved to be the winner. Each of these years the Massachusetts team was the best and went into the game the favorite, but this year things are a little different. Exeter has one of the best teams that has been turned out at the school for many years, and they will go into the game the logical favorites.

Field Rather Soft.

The rain of yesterday softened up Plympton Field and the soggy conditions will prove to be a handicap against Andover. The home team is heavier than the visiting eleven and they will find it easier to get started than the lighter Andover team, so they will be forced to slow down to get sure footing.

Both teams will be able to put their full strength in the field to-day, as neither team has suffered defeat and each team has won triumphant battles this season, so it is not expected that any of the players will show signs of nervousness. The players have been grilled and groomed for this game, and each man knows what is at stake for him to do.

Dame Rumor has it that Saturday of these two teams both showed marked improvement, but nevertheless the winner cannot be picked. This year's battle will be between two teams nearer which one will than any in the history of these schools. Although there is a little weight on the Massachusetts team, Andover will make up in speed what little handicap Andover will have.

Both teams have shown good team work, the line advancing like a unit and interference being formed in good style. At times each line has been able to tear big holes in their opponents' line by hard working together, but what the lines will do when opposed to each other remains to be seen. The line that gets the jump will be the winner and it will be interesting to watch the fight between the forwards for supremacy.

Depend On Generals.

The work of the generals will have a lot to do with a win or a defeat. It will be up to these men to plan the style of attack and points to batter and good generalship alone often brings a team victory. Exeter has a quarterback in Dickerman who has proved to be a bundle of knowledge and speed, and the Exeter players to a man rely on him to plan the attack that will bring victory. Dickerman is a clever handler of the ball, good on forward passes and he gets the backs away with a snap that is a feature of the Exeter play. Andover has two men who are both of varsity caliber and it will not be decided till the last minutes who will start the game. Malcolm has been the regular quarterback and has always given him a hard run. Thompson was put in the line for the first time in the Tech game and he showed such great speed and ability that this week he has been groomed for the regular position.

Mass meeting was held at both schools last night and the enthusiasm was aroused to the high possible pitch. The undergraduates at the schools will form in rival rooting sections and the battle between the two stands will also be interesting. It is expected that about 15,000 will attend the game and preparations have been made to handle that number.

GALLANT FIGHTS DRAW WITH ROBIDEAU

NEWPORT, Nov. 11.—Johnnie Gallant of Boston and Sam Robideau of the battleship Connecticut fought a twelve-round draw before the Perry A. C. here. The Bay Stater did most of the fighting, but Gallant by a clever defence was able to keep out of trouble. Gallant showed cleverness with his right hand swing, but Robideau ducked out of the way most of the time. The Boston man had the advantage in the clinches.

WORCESTER, Nov. 11.—The Holy Cross varsity eleven will tackle the strong Colby football team on Fitton Field this afternoon and, according to present indication, the local gridiron warriors have plans for taking the Maine lads into camp as a sort of rebuke of their beating received at the hands of the Springfield Training School last Saturday.

The Purple squad has been given some hard workouts this week, Coach Larkin trying to eliminate many of the rough spots which showed in the last week's contest, especially in the backfield, where the interference of the men on running plays was not exceedingly good.

The Holy Cross eleven will see a few changes in the line-up, Lyden being called to right the visiting team on account of the shifting of former Captain Joy to Yale. The end to fill position of starting back, where he will alternate with Carey of the seconds, who has showed considerable work during the week's workouts.

Carmody, left half back, will fill in O'Brien's place at left halfback, while Coleary, an all round man, will open the battle at right half and will be replaced by Dawson.

It is the intentions of Coach Tim Larkin, providing the contest with Colby this afternoon does not prove to be an overly hard one, to use a large number of subs in order to save most of the first string men for the big Worcester Tech-Holy Cross game next week, which is practically the Harvard-Yale gridiron contest of this section of the State.

GREAT DAY FOR SCHOOL TEAMS

The game between Newton High and Brookline High will have the call among the local games to-day. This is the opening contest in the Triangular League, and a lot of interest is connected in the battle. This league is composed of Brookline, Newton and Cambridge Latin and the race every year is very keen. The game will be played on Volkmann Field, Allston, and a great crowd is expected here. Brookline High is the favorite for the game but the Orange and Black team will not be defeated till the final whistle sounds. It should be hard fought throughout.

The success of the Brookline team depends a good lot on one player, Haven Mason, the sturdy quarterback. His runs are expected to put the ball within striking distance and it will be a big blow to the Newton team every time if he is stopped.

The Newton team will be strong, but they will miss the services of Ulrich, the brilliant centre, who is out of the game with a broken leg. The Newton backfield should fill the line good for gains and the Brookline team will have hard time handling it.

Two Suburban League games that will be of much interest as to deciding the league leaders will be played. Everett and Malden clashing at Everett, and Medford and Somerville clashes at Medford. Both big games should turn out to be fine. Everett performs to-morrow.

Although this team was defeated by Medford last week the followers of the Blue and Red team still think that it has a fine chance to get back into the running this afternoon by trimming Malden. This game is not only a league game but it is an annual game between the two rival towns and this makes the battle all the more interesting.

Medford will go into the game with a clean slate and in perfect condition and this may prove to be very much of a factor. Just how the players are confident that they can do the same to Somerville as Malden did last week. Captain Bowyer and Dupre, two star all forwards, will both be out of the game and the loss of these players will be seriously felt.

The battle on the Dunbar Avenue grounds between Dorchester and the High School of Commerce team should prove to be a great attraction. The Boston team is the favorite, but, nevertheless, it will be a hard fought battle. Dorchester has a fighting team this year and has defeated till Tech and Medford this season.

Mechanic Arts plays Winchester at Winchester and should prove to be the most interesting game of the day. The Winchester team has played a great game against Boston Latin this week and this same stamped them as brilliant performers on the gridiron.

Boston Latin plays Beverly at Beverly and should win. Waltham will have Salem as its opponents at Waltham and they will have a chance to pile up a good score. Salem is none too strong and it is not expected that they will hold the Waltham players.

Boston College High will go up to Lowell and play Lowell High, and many good games will be played on the gridirons throughout the State.

TRAINING SCHOOL TO MEET TUFTS

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 11.—The Springfield Training School will meet Tufts on Pratt Field this afternoon in the first game to be ever played in this city between the two teams. On the records of the two teams during the past season the Training School should down their opponents rather handily.

The Training School will be without the services of Jake Kelly, the star outfielder, whose ankle was broken in the Holy Cross game last Saturday, but the team will remain its full strength in the other ten positions.

The home team fears the trusty foot of Wm Adams, the former Brown star kicker, who is playing fullback for the Medford team. Many times this season this star has planted the ball behind the crossbars.

The Training School has had a very successful season, and the coaches expect the team to roll up a good score on their opponents. The team met one defeat this year, and that was when Amherst beat them in the first game of the score by a field goal by Geddes, the star Amherst halfback.

The Tufts team has not had a very successful season, winning three out of six games played. Springfield was one of the Tufts the past two years, in this the score was 6 to 5 and last year they again won 6 to 0.

JOHNNY CONNOLLY IS TRAINING HARD

Johnny Connolly, the Scotch lightweight champion, is having nothing useless to qualify for his battle with Peter Sullivan of Fall River, which is to be decided at New Bedford next Wednesday night. Connolly changed his road route yesterday, instead of going through Neponset and Quincy, as he has been doing, he shifted to Dorchester and Milton. The final workout Connolly had, asked him why he turned in this direction, he smiled and replied that then whispered to Eddie that he had been in Chelsea just long enough to get a few good tips from Jimmy Briggs now to fight Packey Corbett in the fine shape for that bout. He is eager to win the battle.

PACKEY M'FARLAND TO MEET MURPHY

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Packey McFarland and Tommy Murphy will meet in a twenty-round battle on Thanksgiving afternoon at San Francisco. Manager Emil Thiery has accepted the terms offered by Jim Coffroth for the match and will start for the coast with Packey in a few days. It will be the first fight of championship calibre on the coast since Wolgast and Mernin battled, and will be a preliminary, so the coast promoter hopes, to a fight between Packey and Wolgast for the championship title. Packey has met Murphy once before.

Second Rate Fighters Are Now Invading Australia

By JACK CONWAY.

There was a time when we were of the opinion that New York was the easiest spot on the map for second and third rate boxers. But we have since changed our minds, and are unanimously hand that honor to Australia.

Australia is a growing country. Up until the past few years the people of the Antipodes have not had boxing conducted on a large scale. And, as a result, they are unacquainted with the methods of the shrewd fight promoter whose motto is "get the fight, regardless of how often you swindle the people."

Jack Hurley is the leading Australian promoter. McIntosh isn't a swindler or a fight fan, but he is out to make every dollar in sight. In order to accomplish this purpose he has signed up a number of American fighters to perform at his club.

Hurley originally Hughey's intention to have his all-star cast of heavyweights meet Jack Johnson, but "Lil Artha" decided that he had enough fighting for a while and therefore let his contract with McIntosh lapse.

The Australian fight promoter then signed up Sam McVey and shipped him off to Australia where he has engaged him a couple of fights. McIntosh tried to sign up Al Kaufman and Jim Flynn, but both of these beauties turned down his terms.

Driven to desperation, McIntosh got Jack Lester, a big white "dope," who is nothing more than a good trial horse, and sent him to Australia. Sam Langford and Porky Flynn were the next bookers to consent to McIntosh's terms.

The latest American heavyweight to start for the Antipodes is Jim Barry of Chicago. Barry makes the present list of heavyweights who will perform in Australia this Winter as follows: Sam Langford, Sam McVey, Porky Flynn, Jim Barry, Jack Lester, Bill Lang, Bill Squires and one or two others yet to be inscribed. Of this number Langford, McVey and Flynn are the only ones that possess any class.

From here it looks as though the Australian fight fans are going to be offered some nightly pour shows the coming Winter. Langford will undoubtedly be matched to meet such men as Lester, Lang and Barry, some of whom are better than second or third raters. Sam will be able to play with any of these men and will over a K. O. punch inside of half a dozen rounds if he desires.

Barry has gone to Australia chiefly because he could get no fights in this country. He has made himself unpopular over here, and he has progressed on the strength of his foul methods of fighting. Barry is the only unskilled boxer that has ever been the followers of the roped arena in Australia since the days of Peter Jackson and Bob White.

Jimmy Walsh will start getting into shape for a bout with the best bantamweights in the country when he meets Eddie Stanton at Portland, Me., a week hence. Stanton has just returned from Europe where he made a good showing. Walsh is one of the cleverest boxers ever developed in this city and considered by many as the only legitimate claimant to the lightweight championship. Walsh has offered Charley Mahoney a fight anywhere but the Chicago whirlwind has always offered excuses.

Freddy Welsh has started training for his twenty-round bout with champion Ad Wolgast, which is slated to take place on Thanksgiving Day. The Briton is confident of winning. He says:

"Thanksgiving Day's battle is made to order for me. I am a much better boxer than the champion. I am faster, cleverer and possessed of a better fighting head than Wolgast. The only thing which Wolgast possesses is a fighting heart, wonderful stamina and a terrific punch. Wolgast admits that it takes him six or seven rounds to warm up and start fighting. By that time I will have piled up a big lead on points. I am willing to bet that my lead at the end of the tenth round will be so big that every man in the house will be able to see that Wolgast will not be able to overcome my lead unless I knock him out or beg. I am not going into the ring with the intention of knocking out the champion, but I do intend to win on points."

Monsieur Lafayette, "One Round" Hogan, Frankie Burns and Owen Moran also intended to defeat Wolgast on points, but when the day of the bout arrived that fighting heart was too big a handicap to overcome. And it looks as though the same thing would be true in the case of the speedy Welsh.

Al Delmont must have been feeling pretty frisky when he slipped a preliminary purse over on Young Henry of Philadelphia after two rounds of fighting at Atlantic the other night. Al has not done a great deal of work this year, for the simple reason that there has not been an abundance of real United States currency offered for his services. He has had plenty of opportunities to display his wares, but the promoters were unwilling to give him enough money to pay for our fares and lunches. Fight fans, however, are getting tired of watching bouts between boxers that do not know hardly anything about the game of fisticuffs and are demanding the real article.

The American Boy

By THOMAS TAPPER

Be Prepared.

IN the announcement of business houses, particularly those of bankers, brokers and trust companies, you will often see a statement like this:

Capital $1,000,000
Surplus (all earned).....$1,500,000

This means that the business house announces to the public that it has an actual reserve fund, available at all times, that serves as an insurance in any emergency.

The working man who has a steady job, whose bills are all paid, and who has $500 in the bank, is another type of the same business methods. If this working man's expenses can, in hard times, be kept down to $1 per day, he is amply insured for 500 days.

Now, this form of surplus can be made available in many other ways. For the American boy who has just begun work two reserves are necessary. The first is strength-reserve; the second is cash-reserve. We will take up the former in this article and the question of cash-reserve in another.

II.

A working boy's capital, in his first simple business activity, is his health and strength. The value of this kind of capital is well illustrated in this incident:

Two boys were out sailing in a small sailboat off the coast of Massachusetts. A squall struck the boat when it was a mile from shore and it turned over. The boys succeeded in climbing onto the upturned bottom, but the wind and tide carried them out to sea. They determined to drop off and try to reach shore by swimming. One of the boys was an inveterate cigarette smoker. His heart action was not up to normal, and he had little or no control over his breathing, for the lungs do not thrive on inhaled cigarette smoke.

The other boy had all the strength with which nature and hard work had endowed him. He knew he could reach shore. But when he saw that the other boy could not hold out, he wondered whether he had enough strength to save himself and his friend.

He tried, and succeeded.

III.

Business is full of overturned boats. There are always opportunities that put double the work on the worker, and the American Boy who wants to keep to the front must be ready for the call of the heavy burden of more work.

If he is in the trim, with mind clear, and body put out of order through foolish habits, he will be able to stand the strain. Not only that, but it will be a positive pleasure to him, when he feels the load settle down, to brace himself for it and know that he can, by steady force, lift it.

After it is done, he is not only to weary off—he is decidedly a better American boy, for he has discovered that he has a great strength reserve, that he can draw on it, that it will respond to his call; that the very use of it, like money at interest in the bank, will actually increase it.

If, then, the American boy wants to start in business on a safe basis, he must be able to issue an announcement like the banker's but in these words:

Capital.
Strength.
Surplus (all ready for use) As much more Strength.

Business men get a surplus capital in money by earning it. The American boy will get his surplus capital in strength by earning it. Or, better, perhaps, by letting it earn itself.

This is accomplished by living according to a few simple rules.

1. Simple food.
2. Deep breathing.
3. Some fine out of doors.
4. No destructive habits.
5. Plenty of sleep.

Then the strength reserve puts the American boy in line for the next thing, which is cash reserve.

Dependable, if the boat turns bottom up, he can swim ashore, and, if necessary, carry a weaker friend on his back.

HICTANER—By Jean de la Hire

The Man That Lived in the Water—One of the Strangest Stories Ever Written

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

DE CISERAT gave a command. The Cyclone put about and headed for Marseilles at full speed.

Admiral and men were at a loss to know what it all could mean. With an astonishment which they did not try to conceal, they saw Hictaner hang his mask on his belt and lean lightly against the railing of the afterdeck. He looked them over calmly, and his youth and beauty were so great that he seemed elegant to smile, in spite of the sorrow of his face.

Standing around him, instinctively respectful, the Admiral and the two officers put a thousand baffling questions to themselves.

This was evidently a man dressed in silver scales.

How could he live in the water?

What means of navigation and warfare did he use?

Where was his machine?

He said he had a brother like himself. Where did they both come from? What was their end, and what their means?

The Admiral and the officers did not know that Hictaner had fled when he said he was not alone in order to better secure his safety.

Indeed, Molsette's lover had counted upon man's fear rather than his integrity to safeguard himself against attacks.

So when he said that there was a second being like himself he let the fear of vengeance hang over both creations.

In that he had calculated well, for the promises of state are worthless, even more than those of individuals, when peril seems to absolve them from keeping their word.

That is why Hictaner placed himself so confidently in the hands of that humanity which considered him its enemy and with good reason.

Hictaner's Arrival

From the moment of the Cyclone's entrance into the ancient harbor of Marseilles, her crew could hear the great hum of the numberless crowd gathered in streets, alleys, parks, squares and the houses bordering the quays. The waterfront was guarded by eight rows of soldiers with drawn sabers.

An automobile was waiting, just below Cambiere. Preceded by Ciserat and followed by the admiral and the aviation battleship, Hictaner stepped into the car.

Though he was beholding such sights for the first time, he did not show any astonishment, and his grim face persisted in its calmness, with a gravity almost sad.

The automobile passed through a triple row of soldiers. The highway had been completely cleared, and the soldiers stood shoulder to shoulder upon the sidewalks. The windows of the houses were filled with the curious, and great murmurs arose from narrow streets on the wide avenues wherever the crowd was flattened and its which might was beginning fall. The street lamps had been light in advance. Sometimes soldiers were carrying them. Everything had been arranged to supply light for the waning day, so that darkness might provide no shelter for a vile or an assassin.

Night had fallen when Hictaner, still surrounded by his guard, set foot upon the steps leading to Longchamps Palace.

In the assembly hall the men were waiting anxiously. Not a seat was empty.

Crowded around the platform were army and navy officers, official personages and magistrates. In all spaces not filled by seats, picked officers had been stationed with drawn revolvers, who had been ordered to punish any attack upon the Unknown with instant death.

Then they settled in solemn silence—a silence made up of anguish, curiosity and terror.

All the lights in the room had been lighted. Acrylite torches had been hastily installed in all the dark corners. The room was oblique with light and no one could have made the slightest suspicious move, unseen by the watching officers.

They waited.

Suddenly a loud noise was heard.

The soldiers guarding the doors to the speakers' platform presented arms. There was the roll of drums, and then they saw, in advance of his companions, a strange young man whose unclothed body was covered from head to foot by silver scales.

Was This the Scourge?

Everyone's breath stopped short, and everyone's eyes opened wide in amazement. When Hictaner, supple and fine drawn, stood upon the platform stifled exclamations filled the vast hall.

What? This bizarre young man this youth standing over them like a statue of Apollo in pure silver, was the Unknown —the terrible, omnipotent scourge of the world?

Was it this pale, grave young man with great, velvety eyes who had been sinking their battleships?

They were expecting something terrible. What, no one could say, but they vaguely expected an apparition or trampling horror, not a human being, and here was a young man more beautiful than an ancient statue, but weaker, apparently, than a clown wrestler at a country fete!

Nevertheless an unaccountable shudder passed through the assemblage.

The murmur ceased, the silence became supreme, and the men shrank back in their seats.

They were all reflecting that if this were child dared to dictate to the world he must hold in his hands an unimaginable weapon, and they realized that underneath his innocent appearance this unknown was more terrible than Dante's most awesome fancy.

So with superstitious fear they waited for this mysterious man's first words.

Hictaner stood motionless and straight on the platform. He looked at the crowd and he, too, waited.

Suddenly a voice behind him said:

"Gentlemen, this convention of the world's delegates here assembled is in readiness to hear the proposal from the unknown gentleman.

"I beg that he will speak. He will not be interrupted."

Hictaner understood that his moment had come.

His eyes wandered over the crowd of listeners without any apparent emotion, and in a pure, melodious voice, firm but not harsh, he said:

Hictaner's Speech.

"Gentlemen:

"I shall not reveal to you what object my brother and myself have in demanding the submission of all the governments and peoples of the earth.

"The truce granted you ends in two days.

"If by day after to-morrow you have not submitted you will be forced to submit within a month, because no one will be able to continue the struggle.

"I come before you to modify the terms and spirit of our ultimatum, however.

"We do not any longer demand your submission.

"We no longer wish to rule the earth. Our reign has betrayed us.

"He is one of those men known as anarchists or terrorists.

"The French courts had condemned him to death. Charles Revarac is his name.

"This man stole from us a young girl named Molsette and has disappeared with her.

"We wish to find this young girl.

"For that reason we need you. This is the unknown's proposition:

"If you return Molsette to us alive, and Revarac either dead or alive, the world will never hear of us again.

"The unknown will sign a treaty of perpetual peace.

"You have a month in which to find Molsette and Savarac.

"If Molsette and Revarac are not delivered to us within that time we will spread fire and carnage over the whole face of the earth, and we will bury ourselves in the ruins of the world.

"You have access to a description of Revarac, since France has kept him in prison. I will furnish an exact description of Molsette to Admiral Germinet.

"A white dog flying over the Planier Lighthouse will mean that Molsette and Revarac have been found, and that you are holding them in this place for our disposal. I will then come here to sign the treaty of peace.

"If that dog has not been raised before March 31, or if you deceive us by holding it in bad faith, it will be war from the outset.

"And now may I be conducted to the place from which I came? I have no more to say. Please deliberate and act. I have finished."

And Hictaner was silent.

To Be Continued in To-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

"Hictaner" is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A liberal instalment of this remarkable mystery novel will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

Egged Him On

THE village of Woffleston had an entertainment in the public hall, and the Woffletonians were assembled in great numbers to witness the performance of a trained ostrich.

Having duly entered, the strathious bipod in question was not up to concert-pitch. Everything that was wanted of him he failed to do, and he endeavored to climb the footlights and give an exhibition of his own creation.

The widely-advertised act came to a sudden and untimely end, and the trainer emerged from behind the curtain and apologized meekly.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said he, "I am sorry to disappoint you this evening. The performance cannot continue till we get a new orchestra leader."

A murmur of discontent said round the massive building.

"Our conductor, you see," continued the ostrich's lord and master, "wears no hair on his head, and the intelligent bird takes his cranium for an egg!"

You Can Have a Good Complexion

Nine out of every ten cases of bad complexion are due to ignorance or neglect. To neglect the skin is sure death to a beautiful complexion. The skin is composed of two layers, top outer layer of cuticle, and the lower or true skin. The top outer layer consists of little scales held together by a substance which works off from time to time. This layer is full of little holes, called pores. These pores are the outlet of perspiration, oil and other waste matter, which, mixed with dirt and dust, soon closes up the pores.

Look in your mirror, notice the little black spots on your nose and regret by soap and water. They were not intended to catch the dirt and dust.

Every woman's toilet table should contain at least two articles. One to keep the pores open and one to protect them from dirt and dust.

We manufacture two harmless, useful creams, one of which is used for this purpose—Plexo Cleansing Cream and Plexo Greaseless Cream.

We have invested since to a quarter of a million dollars in the trade-mark name of Plexo, and have produced the finest quality money and brains can produce.

Plexo Creams not only cleanse and protect the pores, but by their application remove spots, dullness, redness, roughness and blemishes by stimulating the skins to their natural healthy action.

How to Be Beautiful

By MARGARET HUBBARD AYER

"AT what age is a woman most attractive?" This was the subject of a prize contest held recently in one of the big Paris dailies.

There is nothing new about contests on this subject. It is a much debated question, and crops up periodically, in fact, the same newspaper held one some years ago. The only point of interest is this:

Ten years ago the discussion showed at least to the satisfaction of the reading public that woman was at the zenith of her powers of attraction between the age of thirty and thirty-five.

This year the age was from thirty-five to forty.

"Yes," remarks the cynic, "that's because they've all grown older themselves."

Not entirely, for we see the relgn of the mature woman in the current drama and the heroines of many of our most popular novels are old enough to be the mother of sweet sixteen.

And by the way, where does sweet sixteen come in? She used to be the lovely, fainting goddess of the novelist's ideal, but now she's in the nursery or at school, where she belongs, learning those arts and graces which later are to make her worth while as a social factor. Books dealing with the lives of very young girls are written and read, but they are written for other young girls and no touch of love-making, no problems of real life are permitted to steal into their pages. The heroine of real romance grows older every day. George Meredith was the first man brave enough to say that a virgile woman of twenty-seven was still attractive enough to have a book written about her, and he surely started the ball rolling. Bella Donna, the somewhat lurid lady of Mr. Hitchen's braila, was over forty-three, and recently other heroines quite as mature have appeared before whose charm, beauty or wit the young girl pales and vanishes.

Sarah Bernhardt, at the age of seventy, still commands attention and admiration. Several of our greatest singers who combine beauty with their other talents are close on to fifty, and very few stars who shine either in society or on the stage are less than thirty.

The French newspaper in its long discussion of the subject dwelt especially on the charm of the older woman—a cultivated, refined and polished charm of manner, mind and conversation, which the young girl lacks, but which the older woman has evolved and which compensate for the loss of the fresh physical beauty of youth.

This beauty of youth the French call the Devil's beauty, because it is already condemned to fade. No woman can hope to retain it indefinitely, though with all our modern methods of beautifying the face and figure she need never succumb to the disfigurements which used to accompany old age.

As to the charm of maturity you will see for yourself that those women who at forty and beyond that retain their powers of attraction are all women of brain and heart.

Nothing will wither a face so quickly as a dried-up, selfish heart, and no woman can exercise charm of manner or fascinate and interest others if she has not kept her mind open and active to the events of the times. If you feel yourself growing old stop thinking of yourself and get interested in something else.

But first of all, stop thinking of yourself as old. The age limit is steadily going up. No matter how old you are it may reach you yet.

Rival Musicians

THE village trombone player was returning through the fields on a very dark night after a visit to a neighboring banquet, where the wine had proved too tempting for him. Feeling rather unsky and lonely, he consoled himself with a good blast on his instrument to keep his courage up. Imagine his surprise when he was answered by what sounded very much like a rival at the other end of the field. He blew again, much harder, and there was a second response—this time almost in his ear. It was from the farmer's bull, who, in response to a challenge to a further contest, promptly tossed the challenger into the air. When he had recovered from the shock the trombone player shouted defiantly into the darkness:

"Tha great coward. But Ah can tell thee one thing, my lad. Tha may be a varry strong man, but tha's no musician."

HERSHFIELD

A town is about to be bombarded by the Italian fleet. Claude is aboard the flagship, and while he is anxious to see the Turks defeated, he is more concerned about the safety of Rosamond. If only he could get ashore to aid her! However, the wish seems hopeless.

Claude in itself will never bring anything, but if we take means to enable the wishes it may do some good. Claude quickly gets busy on his wish. The friendly Italians put him in a large shell, which they will fire into the sand somewhere, and Claude can then drill it open.

Little does Rosamond know that the shell whizzing over the battlements contains, not an explosive, but her own true lover. Claude, who has taken this desperate means of getting near her. What girl would not lose her heart to a lover so handsome and so gallant?

The size of the floating grapnels was good. They have dropped the shell containing Claude into a soft patch of sand and the imprisoned hero thinks that all is well, and that he has only to drill his way out and set about the rescue of Rosamond.

Shells are valuable, however, and a smelting company has purchased this and other projectiles from the Turks. The one containing Claude is loaded on a wagon with a lot of others, and the hapless hero is now on his way to the smelting pot. Makes one shiver!

Now indeed is the brave career of Claude about to end in a terrible manner, and no one will know what became of him. Rosamond will pine away in ignorance of his fate. However, for further happenings see Monday's paper. And be sure to observe how—

What He Wished

THE bugle sounded. Into the barrack square marched the regiment, then formed a hollow square, and waited.

For it was an important occasion. Patrick Dolan, a scarred and sunburnt warrior, was to receive some little token of his country's gratitude. The commander-in-chief, notable act of bravery had brought Patrick into the limelight.

"Men," said the officer commanding, "I am proud to pin this medal on the breast of Patrick Dolan—a Briton and a hero! And, under a special order, I shall also place five pounds to his credit in the bank, as some little reward for his gallant conduct."

Patrick stepped forward, and, as heroes do, looked unembarrassed. Still, there was something he wished to ask.

"If—if it's all the same to you, sorr," he blurted out, "I'd rather have the five pound note on me t' shist, and place the medal to me credit at the bank, sorr."

Her Affinity

SHE was as romantic as her name, which is Gertrude.

A couple of her friends were discussing her the other day, as women will, when they meet over afternoon tea.

"Was there anything romantic about her wedding?" asked the lady who wore the wonderful necklace but.

"Rather!" replied the lady in the toque. "You see, she dreamed she was overboard from drowning by a handsome six-footer, with dark, dreamy eyes."

"Yes?" queried Beelzie.

"Well, while she was at the seaside last Summer she pretended to be drowning and screamed and kicked and struggled. Sure enough she was rescued, but by a sandy little man with a squint and a pressed down appearance."

"What a shame! What did she do?"

"Married him, of course!" said Tattle.

"A Beautiful Face and Not a Wrinkle"

Marvelous New Discovery Makes Wrinkles Disappear in a Night in Many Instances and Wonderfully Enhances the Beauty.

Apply this wonderful treatment for two minutes at 11 p. m., then go to bed. Get up at 7 a. m. Lo! the Magic Transformation. "It has completely removed that multitude of lines and wrinkles which I carried for nearly 20 years and I am 60 years of age," writes Mrs. J. H. Boylan.

No massage, straps, cold creams or steaming pots, but a marvelous new discovery that raises the wrinkle and puts it on a level with the surrounding skin. It also raises the flesh underneath the wrinkle and treats the flesh so that it quickly becomes hard and firm. Smoothes out trouble wrinkles, wrinkles of care, wrinkles of age, wrinkles caused by frowning and squinting, wrinkles of almost any kind anywhere. Many say it has made them look 10 to 25 years younger. Women of 50 and even 60 years of age say it has most astonishingly restored them to youth so far as appearances go. I fooled them all and looks my own wrinkle out with this wonderful discovery after beauty specialists had failed to do me any good, and to-day my friends say I have a beautiful face and not a wrinkle. In any event I have no wrinkles, notwithstanding the fact that I am a hard working business woman with great responsibilities.

Accounts of my wonderful discovery have appeared in so many newspapers throughout the country that I have been fairly deluged with letters from women asking for information in regard to the treatment. My time is so occupied that I cannot answer all with a personally written letter. I have therefore had a small folder printed which I shall be pleased to send absolutely free to anyone interested. Please do not send money, as I am glad to give this information to you without charge. Address Harriet Mera, Suite 9105, Syracuse, N. Y., and free information will be sent you in sealed envelope.

He shouted in reply as he darted out of his tent. He heard the sentry's voice, and felt the last remnant of courage die within her.

"Andrew . . ." His thought as had never heard anything so eldritch as the sound of his name as it came shrill and terrified to him through the silence of the forest. His eyes heart was beating with quick, violent throbs when he pushed aside the flaps of her tent and went in.

Even in his haste he had not forgotten a lantern, and its dim light showed him the interior of the tent. She had not undressed, she sat up in it, huddled together, with wide, staring eyes. But it showed him nothing else. The tent was empty of all life save that of the girl and his own. For a moment he thought that, too, had fled, but with a long, shuddering sigh, Clemency flung out her arms and collapsed, dragging sideways from the bed.

But for this faintness, that only terror could have provoked, Grieve would have been inclined to think this night alarm the result of some drunken nightmare, for though he searched the tent and its surroundings, he could find no trace of an intruder. The lantern was still burning, the sleep of fatigued and heavily-fed men, round about the distant camp fire, losing in their unending outer circle that completely covered them like so many corpses laid out for burial.

It was with difficulty that he roused the girl from her faint and forced some brandy between her clenched teeth. She could give no coherent account of what had alarmed her, and his questionings so distressed her that he was compelled to desist, but it was with a shaking of the head that he realized that his fear of the morning had not been misplaced, and that Miss Westgarth was indeed sickening from some disorder. He hoped it was temporary, for her pulse was very slightly quickened, and there was no perceptible fever.

Gave Her Quinine

After infinite difficulty he succeeded in inducing her to take a stiff dose of quinine; the commonest state of the morning had descended on her again, and she seemed hardly aware of his presence. With a certain rough tenderness and efficiency he settled her more comfortably in the narrow bed and went out, leaving the lanterns in charge of the tent.

Outside, in the clear, cool air, he wiped the perspiration from his face with the back of his hand, and sitting down on one of the logs, looked out toward the dense wall of the forest, that stretched like an unbroken barrier before them.

The moon had risen while he had been engaged with the sick girl in the tent; it flooded the clearing with a fairy, almost red light, and touched the trunks of the nearer trees with lines of silver, but the land beyond the barrier it left in deep, dim shadow. To Andrew Grieve's Celtic soul the darkness seemed to speak like a portent.

He raised his head suddenly, and the movement was that of a man who notes under a mistress who has worn out an all too faithful pathway.

He shook his head in the direction of the dark forest recess.

"Ye lussy!" he said, "what tricks are ye up to whatever? But it's too late in the day for ye to shake Andrew Grieve's nerves!"

His fantastic outburst, though he felt ashamed of it, seemed to relieve a little of the tension of the man's nerves. After a final look round he went back to his tent, and his interrupted sleep. But before he turned in he poured out and drank a stiff nip of neat spirit from the little flat stood on the folding table in his tent; then he usually allowed himself at night time when on the march.

Still Slept On

Presently he slept, and while he slept the forest seemed to become shattered slowly and secretly from its inner silence; it woke to low cracklings and stealthy movements, to soft padding sounds as of serpent naked feet.

Then, after a time, these sounds died.

The dawn rose, blown up from the east on a chill wind that set the leaves on the trees shivering whitely, but silently. They too rose in a chase of glory above the deserting legs of the hostilities gathering the white wisps of mist with opalescent gleams of rose and gold.

Still they slept on, mistress of servant, the elderly man and the young girl slept and felt the last remnant of courage die within her.

And their life was the only human life in the forest that the sunlight, filtering somberly through the roofs of the trees, looked down on; their breathing the only sound that broke, however, faintly, the silence that had settled down again over the forest like a pall.

Clemency Westgarth woke to a sense of dreadful comfort. She felt an overwhelming lassitude, the heat seemed greater than any she had yet experienced, her body was bathed in moisture and covered with prickly heat. She wondered why, although by the light the day seemed well advanced, no one came with her coffee, and the fact that she appeared to have been forgotten aroused in her an angry irritability that was totally foreign to her, and was merely the outcome of that African nervous irritability that plays havoc with the greatest powers of self-control.

She called out to the boy who served her personally, but her voice was weak and seemed to have no carrying power: "Joseph! Joseph!"

Something Had Happened

For a moment or two, as no answer came, a fear caught at her heart, and all the forebodings of Andrew Grieve rushed back into her mind. What if these natives had deserted—what . . .

The sound of the Scotsman's voice speaking outside the tent gave her a comforting sense of reassurance.

"Are ye waking, lassy? I've some refreshment for ye. May I come in?"

He came in with a curious hybrid meal on an improvised tray.

Clemency hardly needed to put the questions that rose to her lips. Something had happened, or this man, who adhered so rigidly to the principle that prevails wherever governing and subject races come into contact, that the white man's superiority must be maintained at all hazards, would not have taken upon himself these menial duties.

"What has happened, Andrew? Where is Joseph? Isn't it late—I thought we were to resume the march at daybreak," she said, with a nervous laugh.

"Ah! One question at a time, lassy," Grieve said. "Ay, it is late—nearer sundown than sunbreak—it's a fine sleep you've had. I'm hoping ye find yersel' the better for it?"

"Nearly finished? Why . . ."

The Scotsman stroked his grizzled beard with a deprecating air.

"Well, ye see, lassy," he said, "we kinder overslept ourselves. And while we slept the thing I had a fear o' happened. Our bearers and hammock men are gone, and Joseph wi' them, and a considerable amount o' gear as well."

Did Not Dare Tell Her

He did not dare to tell her, in the face of her angry amazement and distress, what, as a matter of fact, had happened—that the men had taken almost all the provisions, and, by very shrewdly suspected, the box where she kept that large supply of money in actual coin which is necessary for commercial transactions in the bush.

"Gone! It isn't possible!"

Although the real facts of the situation had not by any means as yet penetrated to Clemency's brain, the thought of this abandonment dismayed her. She felt fiercely angry and stormed against the renegades and against Grieve himself.

"How could you let them go? You were very valiant last night, and now"——

"Very true, very true." The man made no protest. He stood unmoved before the angry stream of words that came from the lips of the girl in the camp bed. "But ye see, I'm thinking they got some sleeping powder in me food or me speerit, Miss Westgarth."

He had been telling himself so all the lonely day while his employer slept that curious, dead sleep out in her tent.

It had been the outcome of a well-thought-out plan—the night alarm that had nearly caused its frustration had been the result of some untoward accident which had occurred when one of the men, Joseph probably, had been employed in drugging Miss Westgarth's tent the box containing the money necessary for the journey. It was a plan that had been hatched while the boys were in Nokyere, he felt convinced of that. Queer things were in the air of disaffection. He knew that his error of judgment, his error in bringing no Hausa men from the coast into their native districts, the temptation to desert was too irresistible, and he very shrewdly suspected, as it was in him to trust a nigger, the man had been almost honest, courageous and long faithful, but considerations which had induced him to desert must have been very great indeed.

The Inscrutable Forest.

That, to Andrew Grieve, was the most disquieting thought in the whole matter.

He did not feel afraid of pitting his employer safely to the next village that lay on the confines of the forest. There was one indicated on the route at perhaps less than a day's march, and men could be hired there to take them down to the coast. But knowing the forest as he did, knowing the inscrutable, nether ways of Africa, he feared what might lie in wait for them in the mysterious recesses of the forest—the friendly fiend turned to enemies, the beast in the man, that the West African native can become when his stagnant passions are roused.

Clemency made an angry little sound. She could not trust herself to speak to the man just now; he was fully and utterly to blame for what had happened, she told herself with fierce injustice. No woman would ever have been dissatisfied with his tyranny; he had probably been drinking whisky with them.

She motioned him to leave the tent, and when he took out his pipe and filled the bowl and burst into tears.

Grieve greeted her with his usual impassive brusqueness, that in another man would have been rudeness, but which for him was the height of chivalry, when at last, chastened in temper and exceedingly chastened in appearance, Clemency came out of her tent.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

DO YOU WANT A BEAUTIFUL NOSE?

Miss Lina Cavalieri tells how to make the nose more beautiful, in SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

His Future Plans

SHE was a lady visitor to the prison kindly and well meaning, and as she chatted with a burglar who had been sentenced to six months' imprisonment she thought she detected signs of reform in him.

"And now," she said, "have you any plans for the future on the expiration of your sentence?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am!" he said hopefully. "I've already got the plans of two banks and a postoffice."

WE INVITE EVERY THIN MAN AND WOMEN HERE

EVERY READER OF THIS PAPER TO GET FAT AT OUR EXPENSE

This is an invitation that no thin man or woman can afford to ignore. Well tell you why. We are going to give you a wonderful discovery that loses flabby flesh and puts solid, solid flesh on people who are thin and scrawny—or make the thin form over to that many kinds of symmetrical proportions, of which any lady or gentleman may want a body, full of throbbing life and energy, write for special free offer. Don't starve along, dieting, hoping to get fat. Don't take exercise. Don't rub on fat. Don't eat Sargol that will make you sick and disgust you. Don't do any of the penalties after you take the fat that our wonderful tablets of Sargol will produce. Don't take anything that irritates and it can be taken by the most delicate lady or gentleman without the least embarrassment or a day's loss of time. Results are sure. Here is the statement of those who have tried it and have been convinced—and who will swear to the value of this marvelous preparation.

REV. GEORGE W. DAVIS says:

"I have made a fatiful trial of the Sargol treatment and must say it has brought to me new life and vigor. I have gained twenty pounds of good solid flesh in two weeks, and I feel like a new man. It has given me renewed vitality. It has been the turning point of my life. I would have died, I don't doubt, if I had to take any medicine at all and never walked a step."

MRS. V. I. ROBESHEISER writes:

"I have gained immensely since I took Sargol. I've only taken three bottles yet, and when I began using it, and now I weigh 120 pounds so really this makes myself feel human. I feel stronger and am looking better than ever before, and I very confidently recommend Sargol to all my friends who have been used to me, and me with a thin body. They have given me credit for having more sense than I ever possessed to think I have got to look so well and weigh so heavy. Sargol."

CLAY JOHNSON says:

"Please send me another ten day treatment. I am well pleased with Sargol. It has been the right of my life. I am getting back to my proper weight again. When I took it I only weighed 125 pounds, and now, four weeks later, I am weighing 140 pounds, and feeling fine. I don't have that languid feeling every morning that I used to have. I feel good all the time. I want to weigh 150 pounds, and I am sure that I will be all right. Sargol."

F. GAGNON writes:

"Here is my report since taking the Sargol treatment. I am a man of years of age and was all run down to the very bottom. I had no appetite, and could not sleep. I weighed 125 pounds when I began to take Sargol. I took it a new man. I gained 20 pounds with it and I am weighing 145 pounds and feeling fine. I don't have that languid feeling every morning that I used to have. I feel good all the time. I want to weigh 150 pounds, and I am sure that I will be all right. Sargol."

MRS. VERNIE HOUSE says:

"Sargol is certainly the greatest treatment I ever used. It has helped me greatly. I could hardly eat when I began to take it, but in ten or three days out of a week, with common sense, I can eat anything and it don't hurt me and I have no more headache. I weighed was 129 pounds and now I weigh 140 and feel better than I have for five years. I am now in flesh and I want to be, and shall certainly recommend Sargol to my friends. Sargol."

You may know some thin people or some scrawny, sickly looking ones. We will send you this information if you will write to that one and we will send you absolutely free a 50c package of Sargol. Please do not write us unless you are sincere in wishing to put on flesh. No matter how thin you are, no matter what you have used, we want you to try Sargol. Sargol is a concentrated tablet form, simply put the contents below and inclose the coupon, and we will send you a large package. Mail it to-day. Anty Drudge at the Theatre.

Villian—(In an amateur play) "Ah, the deed is done! Now I must get these blood stains out of my clothes. But how—how shall I do it?"

Anty Drudge—"Well, if you weren't such a bad, wicked man I would tell you that washing with Fels-Naptha soap in cool or lukewarm water will take out blood stains like magic. It's the only soap that will stand this test."

Nowadays, cleanliness stands for a great deal more than freeing things from dirt. It means PURITY, freedom from germ life.

Not many years ago, people purified clothes only after a "catching" illness, when they soaked them in some disinfectant.

But the careful housewife of today considers purity above all else.

She realizes that the air is alive with all kinds of germs of more or less harmful nature;

And she does her wash with the soap that not only cleans-dissolves the dirt, but that destroys harmful germ life:

FELS-NAPTHA purifies. Clothes washed the Fels-Naptha way are sweet, clean, pure and germless.

Fels-Naptha is just as good for household cleaning as it is for washing clothes.

Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper.

SAYS ENGLAND IS GOING BACK

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Dr. Inge, Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, delivered a striking address on modern tendencies before the Women's Diocesan Association at Zion College today. In the course of which he declared that England was fast degenerating and that America will ultimately be the centre of the world's commerce.

The nineteenth century, he said, was in many ways the most remarkable century since the beginning of history, but now that this century is over it seemed to him that civilization was sitting pensively in the midst of her vast accumulations. In all fields, except that of scientific discovery, the signs of exhaustion were very apparent. The race spirit, after its exhausting spurt, was resting on its oars.

Great Britain, he said, had enjoyed certain exceptional advantages, of which it had made the fullest uses, but some of these were passing away inevitably and others were being wantonly sacrificed. America was already, and must be far more decisively in the future, the centre of the world's commerce. For England, he concluded, in no longer the most favored nation geographically.

TO CONSIDER CITY PROBLEMS

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 11.—Delegates to the seventeenth yearly session of the National Municipal League have already begun to arrive, and indications to-day are that the opening meeting Monday will have a greater attendance than any other before held in the history of the organization. The convention will be in session four days, adjourning next Thursday.

Early arrivals for the meeting include some of the foremost civic experts and publicists of the country.

1 DEAD, 1 DYING IN STRIKE RIOT

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—One strike breaker was killed, another mortally injured, and many were hurt during twelve hours of disorder and sanguinolic rioting between the police, the striking drivers of the Standard Cleaning Department and Commissioner Edward's strike breakers. Little headway was made in the removal of the twenty-two hours accumulation of ashes, rubbish and garbage.

The total number of men at work was only 784 of a full quota of 2,500. Only 350 of this number represented drivers who remained loyal and refused to strike.

MOTHER'S O. K. TO MRS. BIDDLE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—Mrs. C. Hartman Kuhn, to-day came judicially to the defence of her daughter, Mrs. Craig Biddle, who nonchalantly smoked a cigarette in the dining room of the Embreeville Stratford and thereby achieved much notoriety and caused a chorus of "Ohs" and "Ahs" to arise.

"Because she smoked in public" said Mrs. Kuhn, "she was accompanied by her husband, and that is the rule observed at most public places. We were at the Belevue, where Mr. and Mrs. Biddle are staying for about a week until they go into their house at Seventeenth and Locust streets. Mr. Kuhn and I live at the Belevue and on the occasion was simply a little family party. We had dinner together, and after dinner Mrs. Biddle lighted a cigarette quite as a matter of course. 'It is well understood that when a woman is accompanied by her husband she may smoke if she wishes, and that rule was observed on this occasion.

Pleasant Voyage and a Safe Return Home to Cardinal O'Connell and His Party, Who Sail From Boston To-day

The good wishes of all Bostonians go with the White Star steamer Canopic to-day as she starts on her voyage to Naples. On board the liner, as her most distinguished passenger, is His Eminence, Cardinal O'Connell, who, accompanied by leading members of the archdiocesan clergy, is on his way to Rome, where, amid the splendors of St. Peter's, he is to receive on November 27, at the hands of Pope Pius X., the highest honor of his eventful life.

All good people of New England, of every church and of no settled creed, unite in wishing Boston's Cardinal-Archbishop a pleasant voyage, a happy stay in Rome and safe return to the city which is proud to number him as one of her most valued leaders.

For a man just over the boundary line of the fifties, the career of Cardinal O'Connell is indeed a record of remarkable and impressive achievement.

Through the recognition of the Supreme Pontiff of his church, who early saw in the Boston priest the highest qualities of learning and of leadership and great force of character, Dr. O'Connell's history in the last decade has been a story of sustained progress, step by step, to successive positions of gravest responsibility.

That he has carried himself in those high offices with dignity and wisdom, that he has met the problems which came to him in a steady stream, since his elevation to the archdiocese of Boston, with courage and discretion, is amply proved by his advancement to the highest council of his ancient church, whose line of illustrious doctors goes back to the dawn of the Christian Era.

Bon voyage to Cardinal O'Connell, and speed and good luck to the good ship Canopic.

The Street Car Conductors' Side of It

If the Public Were More Considerate Traffic Would Be Easier, Travel More Comfortable and Human Nature Improved.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

We print below part of a statement received from a man who has been for many years a worker on the street cars of this country. He has been in many cities and finds the public as a whole inconsiderate and unreasonable.

Many newspapers many times have published complaints about the street car workers.

It seems to be time to give the street car conductors' side, and this newspaper does it gladly.

If the man who complains of a conductor had to run a crowded car and put up with insults, complaints, bad temper and stupidity hour after hour, year after year, on small pay, there would be less complaining done and more sympathy for the street car employes.

Editor AMERICAN:

Few people realize the encounters of a trolley man. A conductor receives daily more abuse in his hours of service than the average workingman receives in a year. First of all, conductors are branded as thieves and are called thick, ignorant and many other insulting names. The street car man, if he hopes to keep his position, cannot retaliate when insulted.

As a conductor I want to say that during my fifteen years' service I have not had an understanding with a motorman or signs or signals with passing crews. No passengers were ever left standing along my route unless a car followed close behind and we had to make up headway or lost time. Every passenger was taken on that could get aboard.

The travelling public makes or mars the car man. If the car man were treated with more civility the car man would gladly return it.

Ninety per cent. of dishonesty among car men is caused by the public. Any one desiring to verify this statement need only ride the "pay-as-you-enter" cars. It will then be noticed how many persons give their fares to the conductors instead of placing them in the fare box, thereby encouraging dishonesty.

Not only that. Let the investigator listen to a few remarks made by the passengers as they are requested to put the fares in the box. The conductor is called all sorts of a fool and openly insulted by the passengers. Why the passengers should become insulted at the request to place the fare in the box I cannot figure out.

More men are dismissed from the service of the trolley companies through the complaints of passengers than for any other cause.

It takes a railroad man of long experience to handle the public as it should be handled. There are few of the men in the employ of the street car companies who can be rightly called railroad men. By railroad man I mean the man who does not get excited under the most trying conditions and does not argue with his passengers.

Few trolley men can be called really ignorant, while a great many of them are above the average in intelligence. In one city in which I worked a conductor was elected alderman several terms.

One of the things needed to improve the trolley men is for the passenger to be considerate of the feelings of the employes. Even though he be only a trolley man and wears a uniform a certain amount of respect is due him. He is human and has a heart and feelings the same as the people who ride with him.

Another thing is for the passenger to have his fare ready and to pay it promptly on request. By doing this the passenger will never have a cause for insulting the conductor or for being insulted. In delaying payment he is jeopardizing the conductor's position and making trouble for the innocent.

One thing that can be said for the trolley men, and that is that they are loyal to their families and live happily on their small earnings.

I have worked for at least ten companies in the larger cities of the United States and have never been discharged or up for dishonesty. I can refer to all my employers without fear, and do not consider myself thick or ignorant. I am no better than any that ride with me, but I am just as good. Sincerely,

TROLLEY CONDUCTOR.

A NICE NOVEMBER DAY AT LAST: I'M GLAD THE SUMMER MONTHS ARE PAST!
UPON A BRACING DAY LIKE THIS I FEEL AS IF I COULDN'T MISS!
WHAT'S THAT—THERE GOES THE BEAGLE NOW! I LOVE TO HEAR HIS MERRY TOW-W!
ALL STEADY! TO A DEAD SURE SHOT—THE GAME'S ALREADY IN THE POT!
BUT WHAT A MONSTROUS LOOKING RABBIT! I'LL LET SOME OTHER SPORTSMAN GRAB IT!
HEE HAW!

Sherlocko the Monk, with his friend, Dr. Watso, is now a regular feature of the Sunday AMERICAN. Don't miss the funny detective work of Sherlocko in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Who Killed Mrs. Nickerson?

Startling Developments in New England's Marvelous Tragedy of the Sea to Be Told in an Exclusive Story of the Great Rhode Island Murder Mystery in Tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Who killed Mrs. Lilly Shannon Nickerson? This would seem to be a question of supreme importance to the authorities of Rhode Island. For Mrs. Nickerson WAS murdered. That has been proven beyond preadventure.

Some startling new facts relative to why Mrs. Nickerson, the handsome young Jamaica Plain woman, was murdered will be published in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN, in the story that has been prepared about this remarkable case that will not only interest every man, woman and child in Rhode Island, but will thrill all New England.

This statement is made because of the fact that behind the murder of Mrs. Nickerson there lies a condition of things in Rhode Island that is simply amazing. This condition is thoroughly explained in the story that has been prepared for the Sunday AMERICAN.

It is possible that Rhode Island is the zone where clever criminals are immune from the law!

This phase of a most remarkable situation is brought out prominently in the story of the Nickerson murder which will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

Everybody is talking about the Nickerson murder in Providence and other large cities and even in the smallest hamlets in Rhode Island. They will talk more when they read the Sunday AMERICAN story of this atrocious crime of the high seas.

The Governor, the Attorney-General, the Coroner are all vitally interested in the condition that has been brought to light through the investigation of this murder.

An unusually large edition of the Sunday AMERICAN will be sent to Rhode Island, but it will be snapped up so quickly that in order to assure yourself of a copy it is advisable that you order your paper from your newsdealer to-day. And the rest of New England is just as much interested in this tragedy of the sea, or will be when they read the Sunday AMERICAN story, as are the people of Rhode Island.

To Pu Yi

By CHESTER FIRKINS

The baby Emperor of China, in whose name a constitutional government has been granted to the people.

POOR little royal baby.
Chief of the Manchu clan,
Shred of fearful Genghis
And splendid Kubla Khan,
Robed in the sacred garments
Of silk and silver and gold,
Ruling five hundred millions—
And only five years old.

Why are you glum, old fellow?
Do they keep you all alone
There in the holy palace,
Perched on a golden throne,
Hearing the mystic mumming
Of those who bow before
Your tiny feet in the sandals
That cannot touch the floor?

Seeing the common children
As you ride in your guarded car,
Have you wondered why you are never
As happy as they are?
That sad little brow and the pouting
Of lips that ought to sing—
They tell us the whole sad story
Of being a baby King.

But, say, have you heard what's happened?
You haven't? Well, 'twas this way:
Good fairies came and carried
That stupid old throne away!
And they made your people love you;
And when you have grown a man,
They will say that you reigned more nobly
Than Genghis or Kubla Khan.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About Being a Page

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WELL, sed Pa, I know jest what you are going for to ask me, you are going to ask me what kep me away from hom so many minits after I shud have been hom. I will tell you, sed Pa to Ma. I was out with a frend of mine, celebrating the grate victory which he won in the election. He has got a swell job, wife, sed Pa, & the reezon I stayed so long talking to him was because I was trying to frame it for a litel poshtun for Bobbie. I thought maybe he mite git a chanst for to git a job as a page in his new office, Pa sed.

I dosnt want Bobbie to be a page, sed Ma. He has at leest ten moar years to go to skool beefour I will let him go out & walk a living.

Oh, I dosnt know, sed Pa, I didnt git so many years skooling beefour I stepped out & made a living. I didnt have much book lerning, Pa sed.

Nobody ever sed you did, Ma cold Pa, but that is no sine that our littel son is going for to be brought up benighted, like them heathen folkz. I want my boy to be a college professor sum day.

But my frend never was a college professor, Pa sed, & look at the nice poshtun he has grabbed. Him & me sat down for two (2) hours, sed Pa, & talked about the lives of great men, thare deeds, all the way from Julus Ceesar clear down to the present day heeroes, like Mister Taft, Counte Mack & Ad Wolgast. Naterally, Pa sed, wen two brite men gits together the flood of idees & conversashun is such that it is hard to make a git-away. Brite minds are like kind hearts, Pa sed, they are moar than butterflies, & besides, sed Pa, they usually stay in one place longer. I dosnt see why you dosnt want littel Bobbie to be a page. He cuddent work for a better man. Look at all the pages of history, Pa sed.

You mite as well go & wash that pool chalk off yure hands, Ma sed, & cum to the tabel. Bobbie shall not work for a living until he has went to skool at leest ten moar years. Maybe he mite be a presidoni sum day, Ma sed, & I do not pre-pose to bamper his future.

I never had no chanst to be a president, Pa sed.

That is neether heer nor thare, sed Ma, I sed that littel Bobbie mite git to be the president. I dosnt think anybody ever thought you wud git into the White House, except on a errand. I am very glad that yure frend got his fine poshtun, but I dosnt want you to use him any moar as a alibi wen the dinner gits cold.

I dosn't care for anyting tout-warms, Pa sed. I feel that I shud assert my manhood. Why dosnt you go, wife, & warm them things over?

What? sed Ma.

I sed Why dosnt you warm over the dinner, sed Pa aggeun.

Pa ate (8) the dinner the way it was.
